Four of each Estate - Quaternionen der Reichsverfassung

Introduction

The concept of the Quaternionen der Reichsverfassung (the Foursomes of the constitution of the Empire), also known as Viergruppen von Reichsständen (Four of each Estate), die Vier Säulen von das Reich (Four Pillars of the Empire), is a unique german phenomenon. Several sets of 4 names of families, town or territories were accorded a special place as representatives of the people, seen not only as the generally accepted trinity of clergy, nobility and commoners, but as a finely stratified society placed as a counterweight to the prevailing 'monopoly' of the seven electors in deciding who should be emperor (and how he ought to rule) – in time moving on to infer a certain special quality on the members – at least on some of these.

The Quaternionen

The earliest evidence of this mythology is the statues on the front of the Frankfurter Römer or Rathaus, added in 1414, and this was probably related to a visit by the then recently elected head-of-state Sigismund of the maison de Luxembourg (r.1411-1437).

The imagery of the Quaternionen of the Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation (HRR) became widespread during the 15th to 17th centuries, and might be found in literature, as mural decorations as well as on drinking glasses. Though it had nothing to do with the actual constitution of the HRR, it was forcefully promoted by Sigismund of Luxembourg and later by Maximilian I of Habsburg (r.1493-1519), and was highly regarded by some of the families who were honoured in this way. The tradition was taken up by writers and artists – and by their sponsors. Though the peak period faded out with the death of Maximilian I, the imagery continued to be used for another century and has survived until today, where quaternionenadler can still be found on glassware in tourist shops.

Though there is no hard evidence, modern research (see Schubert Q) ascribe the beginnings of the tradition to the court of emperor Karl IV von Luxembourg (r.1346-78) sometime between 1350 and 1364. Karl IV was followed by his older son Wenzelas (r.1378-1400), who was deposed and replaced with the elector palatine Ruprecht von Wittelsbach (r.1400-1400). On the death of Ruprecht, Sigismund, the younger son of Karl IV, managed to get himself elected King of the Romans through two contested elections. The tradition of the quaternionen was probably resurrected on the eve of the Council of Constance and propagated by Sigismund in order to promote the emperor (actually just a newly-elected and insecure king, and not yet crowned as emperor) and the secular world as guardians of the Church and Concilium and for the estates, not the Electors, being the basis of the Reich and of the office of Emperor and supreme guardian (Schubert Q 27).

Numerology was widely acclaimed during the Middle ages (Achen S 222-226), e.g. three used for the Ternionen or best of three (3 best christians :: 3 best heathens :: 3 best jews :: 3 oldest coats-of-arms) found in some of the same sources as are the quaternionen. The number four also had a major uses: e.g. 4 prophets; 4 gospels (Mattheus :: Markus :: Lucas :: Johannes); 4 corners of the Cross of Christ; 4 realms in the Book of Daniel; 4 elements; 4 temperaments; 4 cardinal virtues; and the Quadrivium (Arithmetics :: Geometry :: Music :: Astronomy).

Both numbers and forms of presentation varies. The quaternions may be visualized as persons (usually with arms), as arms placed on the body and wings of the imperial eagle (Quaternionenadler), or simply listed by name and / or arms alone. Sometimes the arms of the seven electors were added too – or two times four, if the podesta of Rome was added, representing the pope as the fourth spiritual elector.

In decorative arts, we have it in 1414 on the front of the newly rebuilt Frankfurter Römer or Rathaus and in its great hall intended both for the town council and for meeting of the estates.1414, and probably also on the walls of the Augustinerkirche, one of the meetingplaces of the church council in Konstanz, held 1414-1418. In literature we can find it by 1422 in the poem ‘Spruch von römischen Reich’, and in armorials from c.1460.

The most common selection was 40 names of towns and noble lines, ordered by fours for each of 10 Reichstände, according to Schubert Q:

1 Hertzogen, 2 Margrafen, 3 Landgrafen, 4 Burggrafen, 5 Simple Grafen, 6 Edelfreie / Semperfreie, 7 Ritter / Strenge Herren, 8 Städte, 9 Dörfer, 10 Bauern / Geburen.

Additional groups were added in many sources. In toto 39 sets of quaternionen, some with several alternatives (207 entries) and also variant coats-of arms are noted and arbitrarily numbered.

Jörg Rugen al. Georg Ruxner, a pursuivant employed by emperor Maximilian, has left a contemporary list (Rugen, c.1495): Kurfürsten, Herzöge, Fürsten, Grafen, Freiherren, Ritter und Knecht des HRR: 4 Kurfürsten weltlichen Regiments, 4 Fürsten und oberste Amtsleute, 4 Erzherzöge, 8 Freiherzöge, 12 Erbherzöge, 4 Markgrafen, 4 Landgrafen, 4 Burggrafen, 4 Heergrafen, 4 Flügelgrafen, 52 gefürstete Erz- und Freigrafen des Reichs – in the order of offices, names and titles.

The quaternionen tradition was later adopted by a few towns or territories, e.g. by Cologne, one of the Bauern (no.101, peasants), who had the 'Vier Ritter von Köln' (4 knights), one of which was the von Orsbeck, hereditary Erbkämmerer von Köln, living in the countryside on their castle of Orsbeck near Heinsberg a.d.Roer. The family became extinct in 1711 (Kruse R 390 #74; Fahne KJ 1:314 + 2:109; XRA 3:75).

In the Reichstag of 1510 emperor Maximilian formalized the titles of Reichs-Erbritter for von Andlau a.o. (Sieb A 411; no.71).

Some sources compared

The actual selection and presentation of the quaternionen varies between the sources. The following table is only intended to convey an impression of the scale of variation. Not noted are the finer variations between the arms assigned to a certain family between the sources. For this, see the individual family.

The sources compared are the armorials, all of the Bodensee group:

ING Ingeram al. Codex Cotta; BLW Berliner Wappenbuch; SGH St.Gallen-Haggenberg; GRU Conrad Grünenberg's Wappenbuch; MIL Miltenberg; RUG Jörg Rügen; and ORT Ortenburg; and the pictorial sources:

BA Beck: Agrippina, 1492; KK Koelhoff: Kölner Chronik, 1499, uncoloured woodcuts;

IM Innsbrucker mural in Friedrichstrasse 7, 1495, probably from Hans Burgmair;

The families named as quaternionen

There was no ancient titles or offices involved in naming a family or lordship as one of the quaternions, though a few of these later petitioned emperor Maximilian to confirm the legend as an honour. Schubert a.o. have proposed that many of the names came from prominent courtiers of Karl IV (and/or possibly adherents of the house of Luxembourg), but this has not been substantiated, and further research is needed.

The following table gives the various titles and lordships mentioned in the sources consulted, primarily the armorials, the Kölner Chronik, and the Innsbrucker mural, but additional variants might be present in other sources. The order of entries are arbitrarily numbered with the more common one at the beginning. The comments give the coats-of-arms with separation of colours and figures as in Clemmensen OM, and a few key details and references on the families. For further information on the presence of the arms in armorials see either Clemmensen OM or one of the editions given there or in the bibliography below. X indicates a mixture of colours for fields or figures per pale, checky etc. Z is the shorthand for vair. The blazon of quarters are separated with semi-colons.
