1. Introduction

This edition of the armorial of the Concilium Constantiense is an artificial construction not only in its structure, but also in the presentation of the individual items. As the title infers, the emphasis is on the blazoning of the arms and on the people who used these arms. But in addition the sources available give a rare view of how medieval editors of armorials (and of manuscripts) worked. This edition combines two elements: coats-of-arms placed in miniatures or used as illustrations in the text of the chronicle, and the armorial proper. The latter, or rather the surviving versions of it, is a feature appended to some manuscript copies of a chronicle of the church council held in the merchant town of Konstanz or Constance on the Bodensee on the Swiss-German border during 1414-1418.

The chronicle is now named after the probable author of the Urtext, Ulrich Richental (c.1360-1437), himself an eyewitness, a low-grade official of the council adminstrators and a well-connected citizen of the town. Though the chronicle has had other names, all scholars agree that the notes on which it is based, and probably also the coats-of-arms, were collected by him. However, Richental was dead by the time the surviving manuscripts were written, and most of these are likely to have been revised by Gebhard Dacher (1421-1471), also a citizen of the town. For various reasons, the chronicle became popular and was among the early works to get into print. The 1483 incunable contains the first ever printing of an armorial.

The items of the present edition were first transcribed and blazoned from the Konstanzer or Rosgarten manuscript, ms. K, as printed in facsimile by Otto Feger in 1964. As the work progressed it became evident that the arms in the several sources varied in number, had different legends and were entered in different order.

Presenting the 7563 non-aligned arms of five manuscripts, mss. A & G & K & P & W, and three printed versions, vs. D & H & S is, in a simple and logical way, rather difficult and was not made easier as the armorial might be classified as either illustrative, occasional, composite or universal, with many miniatures containing coats-of-arms between pages of narrative text, and some having lists of participants and their retinues and number of horses besides the usual tables of arms. The solution adopted was to list the arms in the numerical order of the largest version, the 1210 arms in the printed vs. D, with additional arms from the other versions entered at the end in the order of mss. G, K, A, P and W. Full concordances between versions and the base numeration (vs. D and supplementary items) are included as appendices. The armorial, as presented here, contains altogether 1683 different items. Readers, proficient in German, may consult the works of Mathiessen or Wacker for a comprehensive analysis of the text and illustrations, Brandmüller on the concilium, and Buck for a full transcription of ms. A.

The items have been divided into 20 segments and covers six different areas, each discussed in separate chapters, as detailed in chapter 4 editorial principles. The first area, the narrative, the miniatures and the arms inserted into the text, constitutes segment 1. The second area, the clergy, comprises segments 2 popes, 3 cardinals, 4 members of the conclave, 5 bishops, 6 abbots, 7 canons, 8 religious orders, and 9 universities. The third area, the nobility, follows the traditional order of rank of medieval armorials, segment 10 kings, 11 electors, 12 dukes, 13 princely counts, 14 counts, 15 barons, 16 gentry/untitled nobles, and the unusual 17 ladies. The remaining three areas are: segment 18 ternionen, 19 imaginary realms, and 20 towns.

In general, the blazons are given as printed in vs. D (Sorg 1483), unless obviously confounded. They have the dictionary form with colours and figures separated and details omitted. The legends vary greatly between the various manuscripts and printings. Some include first names and details of their owners' retinues, and some have had editorial comments added. But in essence they give the same information on the owners. For this edition the shorter legends of ms. K as first entered have been retained for most items. If the legend of another version contained more information, this legend has been substituted without specific attribution to the source manuscript. Where the versions assign the arms to different persons or the arms are substantially different, this has been noted. As the works of Matthiessen and of Wacker have shown, there is no ‘original manuscript’ or ‘correct version’ of the chronicle, but several editions destined for different audiences – probably devised by Ulrich Richental himself with minor later revisions over the next 50 years. In a similar vein, this is but another edition destined for another select audience 500 years after the collection of documents and observations.

Though unnoticed by most scholars one more armorial has survived giving additional coats-of-arms of people present during the concilium. Its availability was probably obscured as it is included in a treatise of a herald's duties by an anonymous Portuguese herald. The Livro de arautos (ARK) is presently held in the University of Manchester as John Rylands University Library, ms. Latin 28. The textual part has been examined in 1977 by Nascimento and the armorial parts summarised by Paravicini at a conference in 2007 published in 2008. The 258 coats-of-arms are largely complementary to Richental with an overlap of only about a fourth of the items. An edition of ms. Latin 28 by the present author is in progress.

2. Background

The Church Council held in Konstanz 1414-1418 was one of several conferences of the ecclesiastical dignitaries held in the late Middle Ages. As the name implies they were primarily concerned with spiritual matters and the governing of the Western Church. But they were also heavily influenced by the secular politics of the time. The schism was largely forced upon the Church by the rivalry of the secular powers. The pope or popes might appoint cardinals and bishops, but to gain their temporalities (i.e. money), they would usually need the king's or prince's approval. A substantial part of the bishops acquired the mitre through working at a court as principal secretaries or chancellors and kept the interests of their former masters in mind. Other bishops were scions of the local lords and kept their family's interests at heart. This would usually go along with their overlord's. Acquiring a mitre or cardinal's hat also implied that their relatives would gain office either at court or in the Church. Not least, support and obedience from a sufficient number of secular rulers was necessary for any pope. The pope might refuse requests and excommunicate, but that was of little use if the ruler just changed his obedience to another claimant (pope or anti-pope).

Among the several conflicts at the time, one may note the later phase of the Anglo-French Hundred Years' War and its sideshow on the Iberian peninsula with civil war between the branches of the Aragonese-Castilian royal family and English and French intervention. The beginning of the Schism coincided with the French rolling back their losses from the Treaty of Brétigny, leaving the English on a weak defensive and armistice until the invasions of 1414-1419. In North-Eastern Germany the Teutonic Order had waged a war of conquest against Poland and Lithuania. Many guest-warriors (English, French, Brabantians, Germans) participated in these crusades, though the crusade-term wore a bit thin after the christening of the Polish-Lithuanian rulers in 1385. The tide turned definitively with the defeat of the Teutonic Order at Tannenberg in 1410. In the South-East the Ottoman Turks infiltrated and subdued most of the Balkans, defeating a major counteroffensive led by Sigismund and the heir to Burgundy at Nicopolis in 1396. The Moslem advance scared the orthodox emperor of Constantinople and the Eastern Church so much that they considered joining the Western Church. In Italy there was armed rivalry between the various mini states, both the northern, nominally part of the HRR, and the French or Aragonese-dominated southern parts. This rivalry included the Hungarian provinces in the North-Western Balkan, part of the realm of Sigismund. And just to round off there were multiple conflicts between lay and spiritual parties: bishops and abbots on one side, princes and barons on the other, and burghers against either part – not forgetting bishop-elects versus competing bishop-appointees.

2.1 The Great Western Schism 1378-1418

At the beginning, the popes were bishops of Rome and stayed there until 1305 when the conclave elected Bertrand de Got Abp. Bordeaux as pope Clement V. Clement supported the French expansionist policy and in 1309 took residence in Avignon. The popes stayed there until 1377 when Gregory XI (Beaufort, r. 1370-1378) bowed to Italian pressure and moved to Rome. On his death soon after, the conclave was besieged by a Roman mob demanding the election of an Italian, preferably a Roman. In April 1478 the conclave elected Bartolomeo Prignani Abp. Bari, a non-cardinal, as Pope Urban VI (r. 1378-1389). Soon after the election first the French cardinals and then the rest fled to Fondi in Northern Italy (Miranda C). On the urging of Charles V R. France they elected a counter-pope, Robert de Genève as Clement VII (r. 1378-1398).

Urban VI stayed in Rome and Clement VII took residence in Avignon, becoming the first popes of the schism. The demands of two papal courts increased the Church's demand for money and ingenuity in getting it, which, combined with the rampant corruption, strengthened the movements to reform the Church. For the spiritual authorities some of these movements equalled heresy, e.g. the teachings of Jan Huss in Bohemia and Wycliffe in England. An attempt was made in 1409 at the council of Pisa to reunify the Church, deposing both incumbent popes, but only succeeding in creating a third papal court. The various lay powers took sides in the strife, the French supporting Avignon and the English and most Germans Rome. Some time before the Konstanz council the Roman pope fled to Rimini to come under the protection of its lord, Malatesta. The Papal States were taken over by the Pisan pope. Similarly the French evicted Benedict XIII from Avignon, who fled to Peniscola in Catalonia.

Though the schism ended with the election of Martin V (Colonna, r. 1417-1431) and his successors Eugenius IV (Condulmero, r. 1431-1439, d. 1447) and Nicholas V (Parentucilli, r. 1447-1455), the making of counter-popes did not. Spanish and French politics were instrumental in electing Clement VIII (Sanchez Munoz, r. 1423-1429, d. 1447), Benedict XIV (Garnier, r. 1425, d.c. 1430) and Felix V (Savoie, r. 1439-1449, d. 1451).

The contending popes and their main supporters were:
Roman obedience: Urban VI (Prignani, r. 1378-1389), Boniface IX (Tomacelli, r. 1389-1404), Innocent VII (Migliorati, r. 1404-1406), Gregory XII (Correr, r. 1406-1415, d. 1417).
Supported by: HRR & Hungary, England, Denmark-Sweden-Norway, Poland and most of Northern Italy (e.g. Rimini, Venezia) and the German princes.

Avignese obedience: Clement VII (Genève, r. 1378-1398), Benedict XIII (Luna, r. 1394-1423). Supported by: France, Aragon, Castille, Scotland, Napoli, Cyprus and Bourgogne.
Pisan obedience: Alexander V (Filargo, r. 1409-10), Johannes XXIII (Cossa, r. 1410-1415, d. 1419). Supported by: HHR & Hungary; England, Mainz, Firenze, Milano, OT;

2.3 Sigismund and Richental

Though coming from opposite ends of the social ladder, Sigismund and Richental had one thing in common – the inability to do no more than almost succeed.

Sigismund was born in 1368 as the second son of Karl IV von Luxembourg (d. 1378), emperor and king of Böhmen. At the age of 6 he was betrothed to Mary (1370-95), eldest daughter and coheir of Louis 'le Grand' d'Anjou R. Hungary & Poland (d. 1382), and educated in Poland and Hungary. On his father's death, then aged 10, he inherited MGf. & Kf. Brandenburg. Sigismund was only a fairly accomplished intriguer, and his efforts had the Polish nobility driving him out and electing the husband of the younger daughter Hedwig, Jogaila of Lithuania (Vladislav II, 1354-1434). Marrying Mary in 1385, he was met by an insurrection of a part of the Hungarian nobility. Mary and her mother Elisabeth of Bosnia were imprisoned by the rebels. Elisabeth died, probably murdered, in prison. Sigismund managed to be crowned R. Hungary in his own right, but had to pay his Garai allies for their support. Being always in need of money, he pawned and gave Brandenburg to his uncle Jobst MGf.Mähren in 1388, got it back on his death in 1411, only to have to give it to another ally, Friedrich von Zollern-Nürnberg, in 1415/17. More civil strife, now supported by the Anjous of Napoli, followed up to 1395. Then a Turkish invasion occurred, but Sigimund managed to collect support from several German and French princes, only to be defeated at Nicopolis in 1396. More civil strife and a war with Venezia filled the following years with Sigismund being twice deposed, once imprisoned, and probably forced to marry Barbara Cilly (1392-1451) in 1406.

Nonetheless he got himself acknowledged as heir to his childless half-brother Wenzel, Dt. Kg & R.Böhmen. But when in 1400 Wenzel was deposed as Dt. Kg. in favour of Ruprecht Kf. Pfalz, Sigismund held him prisoner until 1403. On the death of Ruprecht in 1410, Sigismund could not get a majority of the electors, four of which (Köln, Mainz, Sachsen, Böhmen) then chose his cousin Jobst as Dt. Kg. Fortunately Jobst died soon after and Sigismund got five of the electors behind him (himself and the four above), but had to wait until 1414 to be crowned in Aachen. From Aachen he went to the concilium in Konstanz.

In between he had changed his obedience to the Pisaner pope Johannes XXIII, and at a meeting in Lodi in Northern Italy he persuaded the Pope to hold a general Council of the Church. On the advice of i.a. Gf. Nellenburg, Konstanz was chosen as the venue. Ending heresy was one of the agendas, and Sigismund persuaded one of the main reformers, Jan Huss, to accept his pledge of safety and come too. This did not deter the clergy from arresting Huss just days before Sigismund arrived. After the deposition of Johannes XXIII, Sigismund was absent from Konstanz 1415.07.14-27.01.1417 on travels to Spain, England and France in order to collect support for ending the Schism. After Konstanz his fortunes waned and he gradually lost almost any influence on both European and German politics. He became bogged down in wars against the Bohemian Hussites, against Poland and against the Turks. Though he managed to get himself crowned as emperor in Rome in 1433, he died in 1437, last of his line, leaving only a daughter to pass the crowns on to the Austrian (ancient Swiss) house of Habsburg.

Ulrich Richental was born between 1356 and 1360 as son of the Stadtschreiber (town scribe, an official) Johannes Richental, who held the office 1356-1389. His paternal grandmother Margaretha von Sünchingen was daughter of the then notary of the Konstanzer Kurie. They were probably commoners, but related to the patrician family Schneewis. Johannes used a garb (Ährenbuschel) in his seal, and Ulrich, who lost a seal in 1415, in 1434 used a roe-deer. Around 1380 the young Ulrich must have applied for a position (a canonry) in one of the minor Chorherrenstifte, St.Johann, but soon abandoned any such living. By 1410 he was married to Anne Eglin (d. 1445), held citizenship and owned a house in town and some property in the vicinity. He probably settled as a private scribe and attorney with fair relations to both the town authorities and regional nobles, notably count Eberhard von Nellenburg.

During the concilium, Ulrich obtained the de facto position of a minor official. He was probably the first to know that Konstanz was chosen as the venue, when Nellenburg wrote to him from Lodi in December 1413 and asked him to prepare for a major influx of people. He had much work to do in the gathering of provisions and in collecting notes on prices, arrivals and departures. As the other property owners he had visitors staying, by his own words the Abp. Gnesen and Andrzej Laskary Goclawski (d. 1426, Bp. Posnan, spokesman at Konstanz 1414-18 as Bp-Elect). Through both his work and his lodgers, he could keep good relations to many of the visitors, their heralds and servants, and even obtained some copies of official correspondence and minutes. Noting the visitors' arms was one way of recording their stay, as coats-of-arms were put up outside their lodgings. Throughout Ulrich took notes and kept copies of lists and papers in his private archive.

The town thrived on being a conference centre, but afterwards business faded, and the commercial affairs of Ulrich declined. So at one point in the 1420'es he started collecting his notes into a rough draft of a town chronicle. Town chronicles were popular in Germany at this time, and they were saleable. As he was never privy to what happened during the sessions, he focused on glorifying his home town, the pageantry of the great occasion, the commercial life (price fluctuations and provisioning) and not least the men who took part. But his chronicle apparently did not sell well, and he became relatively impoverished. In his later years he tried with several different editions targeting different groups of potential customers and had local workshops writing and illustrating the manuscripts. All of these are now lost, possibly except the Winthertur manuscript. (ADB 1889, Wacker KK 1:11-14, Mathiessen KK 1:76-87). A generation later an industrious local publisher Gebhard Dacher (1421-1471) had several versions and copies made in his workshops, incl. mss. G & P. As the church reform movements increased in force and printing became easier, descriptions of the council that ended the schism became saleable, and the early printers too could make money out of it.

3. Versions and Derivatives

The work of Ulrich Richental has been examined several times during the nearly 600 years since it was first edited. Though dismissed as a primary historical source already in the 17th century by Herman Hardt (1660-1746), it has drawn the interest of linguists, art, medieval and ecclesiastical historians as well as armorists. Fifteen manuscripts and three early printings of the Chronicle itself have survived to the present time, and it is known that more are lost. The printings are essentially identical, while of the manuscripts 7 are illustrated with miniatures and 5 of these contain tables with several hundred coats of arms. The relations between the various manuscripts have been studied with both textual and iconographical analysis and the resulting tree-structure (App.B, fig.a) have remained essentially unchanged since 1894 (Kautsch DH 464, Mathiessen KK 107, Wacker KK 1:18) as have the designations of surviving and putative manuscripts (small letters for putatives and capitals or names for survivors).

Though the heraldic content had (in part) been reproduced in facsimile and duly noted by the above, neither have utilized it for analysis. Only Eduard Zimmermann, whose main interest was Southern German ecclesiastical heraldry, has attempted to put some sense into the confusing segments of bishops and abbots. This is a pity, as the heraldic evidence might change the perceived relations between the manuscripts in the direction of the modified tree-structure (App. B, fig. b).

As the contemporary public found the text and illustrations interesting and was willing to pay for them, they were kept 'in print' for 150 years. Similarly, much of the heraldry was considered enjoyable and was reused in several armorials of Southern German origin – and are to be found with all mistakes and confusion in modern reprints, and sadly, as in the case of both the old and the newer Siebmacher, without the real source of the coats of arms being given.

Though printing by the late 15th century had taken over as the medium to propagate information, being it religion, history or mundane areas such as medicine or crafts, copies of manuscripts were still being commissioned from artisan workshops during most of the 16th century for general chronicles, prayer books and family chronicles of noble houses, e.g. for Zimmern (1565), Zollern (1570) and Truchsess von Waldburg (1530), or for wealthy burghers, e.g. Georg Han from Überlingen (1590). Most of these were illustrated, some with coloured pen drawings, others with woodcuts by Burkmair and Dürer. Besides miniatures showing ancestors, possessions and deeds performed, they often included coats of arms in large numbers, not least imaginary arms of mythological and antique persons, in the case of Georg Han clearly copied from Virgil Solis' Wappenbüchlein (VSW), rated as typical of the period by Kurras (p.428-429, 440), but in reality drawing on the Richental chronicle more than a century back.

3.1 Authors, editors and artisans

There is a general consensus that the origin of all manuscripts is a collection of observations, documents, copies and notes (putative 'ms. q') kept and arranged by the konstanzer citizen Ulrich Richental (d.c.1435) into different manuscript editions (putative mss. x, r & s) focused on different groups of customers (App. B, fig. a; Wacker KK 1:301-303). The earliest version of the 1420'es ('ms. x') was intended for the clergy in both the tone of reform and the structure of the armorial (App. C). The later versions ('mss. r & s') were more critical of the church, expressing anti-papal, conciliar, oecumenial and pro-Hussite tones. There is a general agreement that Richental himself had the earliest manuscripts written and illustrated in local workshops and by local artisans (possibly Konrad Witz), and that there is only one possible suvivor of these, the Winterthur – without illustrations or heraldry. This collection, privately started and continued with official sanction, is probably the core of the town's so-called official Konstanzer Konzilakten.

From the lost Richental 'originals' of 1420-35, there is a gap of a generation until the surviving manuscripts were made. Nearly all of these have been dated to around 1470, with the first printed version (vs. D) by Anton Sorg in Augsburg coming off the presses in 1483. The stocks used for the Sorg coat-of-arms woodcuts were preserved and reused by both Steiner of Augsburg (vs. S/D2, 1536) and by Feyerabend of Frankfurt am Main (vs. F/D3, 1575). Though the woodcuts of the illustration used for the narrative were remade by Steiner, as far as the heraldry is concerned, these and any alterations and mistakes made were due to the workshops and artisans employed by Anton Sorg. Gisela Wacker differs from the general opinion (Berchem &al. 35; Matthiessen KK 103) that the basis for the printed editions is the St. Georgen manuscript (ms. G), presently in Karlsruhe. She proposes instead a putative ‘ms. a5’, which the present author considers superfluous (see below).

The manuscripts fall into three groups according to their use of Latin and/or German vernacular, their layout (single or double column), paper size, illustrations, key chapters, and whether the author used a subjective ('Ich'-centrered) or attempted objective form of presentation. The third group shows a mix of the above indicators. All three evaluators (Kautsch, Mathiessen and Wacker) essentially agree on this grouping, but neither has attempted to use the differences in the concordance and selection of arms as a major indicator.

For the 'armorial' versions, mss. A & P belong to the subjective group textually based on the putative 'ms. x' (<1424, for a cleric), mss. K & W to the objective group based on 'ms. r' (<1431, for a reform-oriented lay person) through the deviates 'ms. y' and 'ms. z', while ms. G and the printed versions are of the mixed type, but based on 'ms. r'. The layout of both text and illustrations supports this basic grouping. Mss. A & P use double-column and illustrations covering two pages (e.g. ms. P:118v-119r). Mss. K & W uses single-column and illustrations kept to one page and set in a border.

3.2 The illustrations and coats-of-arms

The five manuscripts and two printed versions used for this edition have a varying number of miniatures, some adorned with coats of arms, but most without. The miniatures might vary in style and details. But as they are all easily recognizable with a common motive and layout, there must have been a common 'master set' from which the later illustrations were copied. In her thesis, Gisela Wacker summarized and numbered 120 miniatures and put them into chronologial order (Wacker KK 2:342-353). Of these some 50 have coats-of-arms as listed in Appendix E.

The table in the appendix gives the Wacker number, the item numbers of the coats-of-arms found in any of the versions and the pages containing arms. In addition, the pages of the versions without arms are noted. For mss. P & G there is a difference in pagination. Wacker used the older notation, whereas this edition has the newer notation preferred by the holding institutions.

Besides the miniatures there are a number of coat-of-arms inserted into the text and, most important for this edition, a separate armorial, divided into 19 segments. Apart from the additional members of the Conclave (segm. 4) and a few bishops (vs. D:72r) the armorial is placed at the end of the chronicle. Arms inserted into the text or the miniatures are numbered consecutively as they occur in vs. D (segm. 1). Together with their variants in other versions these arms (marked 01) are grouped in the first part of the armorial (The Chronicle – narrative) with the title of the miniature in double quotations marks placed in the legend for the first item. This part has 194 items, of which the first 76 are in vs. D (items 1-44, 75-84, 90-107, 144-145, 564-565). As many pages have been lost from ms. G, this version only has 17 items, while ms. P has 123, ms. A 89, ms. K 76 and ms. W 65. The first item of a miniature includes a survey of all arms in all versions.

3.3 The armorial manuscripts

Some key features of the five manuscripts having large numbers of coats-of-arms and of the printed versions are summarized below. More details, incl. extensive listings of all miniatures, can be found in Mathiessen KK 99-112 and Wacker KK vol. 1, App. II. Wacker KK vol. 2 is a collection of miniatures in b/w from the various versions. The manuscript pedigree has been reproduced in Appendix B, and an overview of the segments in Appendix C. The dating proposed by Wacker has been retained. All the surviving armorial manuscripts are assumed to have been made during the decade 1464-1475.

The various editions present the individual items in different order. For about half the items they have been copied directly in batches, and one can almost ascertain which names were written on which page of the draft. The remainder appears to have been copied by pick and mix. Where items have been omitted or added to a particular edition, this would be evidence that one editon might be assumed to be the source of another. Part of the confusion is due to the fact that the present author recognized too late that a fragment ought to have been read per column rather than by row or vice versa. The same misapprehension was also made by the medieval copyists, and the reader with the inclination and some spare time can have the fun of deciding who made which misreading.

Ms. A, Aulendorf, New York Public Library, Astor, Lennox and Tilden Foundation, Spencer Collection Ms. 32, 933 items, 77 in illustrations and 856 arms in text and tables, 114 pages of illustrations in pen and watercolour. Acquired 1935 from Gfl. Königsegg Bibliothek in Aulendorf. The full text incl. legends are printed in Buck KCR, available on the web. Selected pages of arms are on the NYPL website. Facsimile in b/w by Hermann Sevin, Karlsruhe 1880, not examined.

Made in Überlingen 1460/1465. Paper with watermark ‘human head with star on pale’, 41 x 30 cm, 8 + 501 + 8 pp., double column, in German, gothic cursive mid 15th century, modern pagination in upper corners. Illustrations placed in relation to the narrative. Fashion of clothes is c.1460. Tables of arms on pp.309-505 interspersed with lists of participants. Includes fragments of participants not in ms. K. Ends with the recapitulatio of the participants. The last part of the narrative was hastily completed. The artist might be the Master of the frescoes of the History of Jacob in St.Jodok in Überlingen. The arms of the higher clergy are painted in the right column below their names, while they are ‘portrayed’ praying in the left column – usually 3 per page. Most legends to the arms have only the titles of the owner, but some have the numbers of their retinue or horses. The layout is irregular, some pages apparently by 3 columns, but all read per row. The order of segments is very similar to mss. K & W: 11a, 1, 3-9, 17, 11b-16, 19, 10. Items in segments 2 popes, 18 ternions and 20 towns are omitted. Many of the fragment sequences are similar to either mss. K (4, 5, 11-13, 17) or P (3, 7-9) with 110 items unique (a few also in ms. P) and 181 items not in vs. D.

Ms. G, St. Georgen, Karlsruhe, Badische Landesbibliothek, Cod. St. Georgen 63 (Cod. Pap. Germ. LXVIII), 1022 items surviving, incl. 9 in illustrations and 1013 arms in text and tables. With very few exceptions page by page concordance between ms. G and vs. D in tables of arms. It was owned in the 18th century by Kloster St.Georgen in Schwarzwald. Possibly made in the workshop of Gebhard Dacher, whose hand is on ff. 254r-264v, and who might be the author of the reworking of the text. Miniatures probably made in the Dacher workshop, similar to those in ms. P.

Made in Konstanz c. 1470. Paper, watermark not noted, 29.5 x 21.5 cm, 10 + 267 + 4 ff., double columns. Many folios missing, see concordance in App. G of old (used by Wacker) and modern (used here) foliation. Many of the older folio numbers are illegible as the pages were cut at the top and right edges on rebinding. List of participants with tables of arms on ff. 175v-264v with further tables of arms 85r-174v. Very few illustrations have survived, placed with the narrative. The legends to the arms have only the titles of the owner, without numbers of their retinue or horses. The layout of the tabular arms is similar to vs. D page by page.

Ms. K, Konstanz, Rosgarten Museum, Hs.1, 892 items, 71 in illustrations and 821 arms in text and tables. Full colour facsimile with introduction and notes in Feger KCR (1964). Facsimile in b/w by Friedrich Bahn 1965, not examined.

Made in Konstanz c.1464, and owned by the town 1474. Indications that the manuscript was never finished. 5 illustrators were employed on the miniatures, incl. 2 from the Murer family. Paper with watermark 'small bull', 39 x 29 cm, 2 + 225 ff., single column, German with some Latin. Copies of official papers related to the Concilium Basiliense of 1432-1438 dated 1465, written by Johan Rastetter on ff.160r-225v. Two hands (of town clerks) employed in the narrative. Most illustrations concentrated on ff. 57v-106r. Tables of arms on ff. 130r-150v. Introductory psalm in Latin. The legends to the arms have only the titles of the owner, without numbers of their retinue or horses. The layout is irregular and reads per row, except for 88r-116r (K104-K322) and 140r-148r (K451-K738) which are read per column. The segments are in nearly similar order as in mss. A & W: 11, 1-5, 19, 10, 17, 11-16, excl. 2.

Ms. P / Pr, Praha, National Library of the Czech Republic, Cod. XVI A 17, 1021 items, 112 in illustrations and 909 arms in text and tables. Full facsimile available on registration as user on www.manuscriptorium.com . Acquired by the Library of the Cathedral St. Veit of Praha in 1669.

Made 1464 in the workshop of Gebhard Dacher, dated with notes and exlibris by himself. Paper with watermark 'bull's head and cross on pale', 31 x 22 cm, 5 + 281 ff., double column, in German. Medieval foliation in red ink on top right, modern foliation in pencil bottom left. Tables of arms, with some text included, on ff. 205r-273v. List of participants on ff. 94r-109v. Illustrations on ff. 11v-163r. The fashion of the clothing has been dated to c.1425 (Mathiessen KK 110). The last part of the narrative was hastily completed. Zimmermann WG noted that ms. P contains arms not present in other manuscripts. The legends to the arms have only the titles of the owner, without numbers of their retinue or horses. The layout of the tabular arms varies between single and double columns, some with irregular additions. The arms are read per row, except for 213r-216r (P219-P275), 218v (P300-P307), 221r-236r (P330-P663), and 245r-246r (P756-P768) read per column. The segments are in irregular order. 1, 3, 5, 8, 9, 17, 14a, 16a & 15a, 19a, 18, 2, 19b, 12, 10, 13, 14b, 15b, 16b, 7, 6.

Ms. W, Wien, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Cod. 3044, 746 items, 60 in illustrations and 686 arms in text and tables. Owned by the Benedictine Monastery of Ochsenhausen (with exlibris) until mid-17th century, then Kloster Lambach in Oberösterreich.

Made in Konstanz c.1475. Paper with watermark 'doubleheaded eagle', 39.5 x 28 cm, 1 + 283 ff., single column, German, many folios lost. On ff.1r-10r and 245r-248r are drawings of the treasures of Ochsenhausen. Lists of participants and tables of arms on 159r-244v. Illustrations in relation to the narrative. The fashion of clothes is c.1470. The legends to the arms have only the titles of the owner, without numbers of their retinue or horses. The text is identical to ms. K, as are also the tables of arms page by page. However, there are more illustrations in ms. W and, not noted before, the lists of participants include preparations for drawing the higher clergy as in ms. A, e.g. on 181r, the legends are written for cardinals Landolfo Marramaldo, Anthoine Challant and Branda Castiglione as on ms. A page 320. The segments are in nearly similar order as in mss. K & A: 11, 1-5, 19, 10, 17, 11-16, excl. 2.

3.4 The printed versions

The three printings of 1483, 1536 and 1576 are essentially similar. Though the text may have been reset and the illustrations recut, most if not all the armorial plates were printed using the same woodblocks. As this version is the most comprehensive, it was chosen as the basis for the edition, and the numeration 1-1210 refers to the Sorg 1483 edition (vs. D). Kautsch, Matthiessen and Berchem & al. assumed that the printed vs. D was based on ms. G. Their arguments were refuted by Gisela Wacker on iconographical evidence, and the dispute is further discussed in the evaluation in chapter 11. On the armorial evidence the present author agrees with Kautsch, Mathiessen and Berchem.

Vs. D / D1, Anton Sorg, printed, 2nd september 1483, Augsburg, 1210 items, 60 in illustrations and 1150 arms in text and tables.

The present edition is based on the facsimile published 1923 in Potsdam by von Berchem, and the incunable held in Darmstadt, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek as inc-iii-55, digitized on www.tudigit.ulb.tu-darmstadt.de/show/inc-iii-55 . As the printed volumes were hand-coloured, the blazons may vary between incunables and facsimile in this aspect. The printing house of Anton Sorg produced more than 100 illustrated books 1475-1493.

Paper, 30 x 21.5 cm, double-column. Miniatures with coats-of-arms, coats-of-arms inserted into the text and followed by tables of arms. Introductory psalm in German. Ends with the recapitulatio of the participants. Text, arms and illustrations were mainly based on ms. G, with some parts of the text taken from ms. P, or close copies of these. Some items have notes on delegates in the legends to the arms of their princes. The layout is mostly 2x2 or 2x3, all read per row. The segments are in apparently irregular order: 1a, 4, 1b, 5a, 1c, 3, 18, 10a, 19, 5b, 8, 9, 6, 7, 10b, 17, 11, 12, 16a, 13-16b, 20, concordant with ms. G, except for pages presently missing in the manuscript. The miniatures are all placed in segment 1. The structure of the illustrations and the armorial in vs. D (and in ms. G) follows the natural order of the time: the pre-conclave chronicle with miniatures (1a), the conclave and election of the new pope (4), post-conclave and the orthodox clergy exemplifying the greater unification of the church (1b, 5a, 1c), the cardinals as next to the pope (3), the secular rulers of all the world from ancient time to date (18, 10a, 19), the spiritual governors and advisers according to rank (5b, 8, 9, 6, 7), Sigismund, his queen and her la dies (10b, 17), the secular nobility by rank (11, 12, 16a, 13-16b), ending with the free towns (20).

The irregularity of placing subsegment 16a [642-651], here designated as untitled nobles as in ms. P, between dukes and princely counts may be attributed to a shuffling of pages in ms. G at the time of copying. None of the artisans making either ms. G or vs. D would be aware of the persons whose arms they very entering.

Vs. S / D2, Heinrich Steiner, Augsburg 1536, 1206 items, uncoloured, volume in the Royal Library, Copenhagen. Essentially a reprint of vs. D, but with new woodcuts for illustrations, e.g.

with portraits of Emperor Charles V and Pope Paul III (Farnese) replacing Sigismund and Johannes XXIII.

Vs. F / D3, Paul Reffler for Samuel Feyerabend, Frankfurt am Main, 1575, 1164 arms (Wacker KK), not examined for this edition.

The vs. H included in the documents in Hardt KK is a late 17th century workup of possibly the Wiener or the Prager manuscripts. This version has 534 items, but includes several items not found in the above versions.

3.5 Derivatives

There is little doubt that the Richental chronicle was widely available in Schwaben, Tirol and Bayern and possibly also in Sachsen and Böhmen during the 15th and 16th centuries both with and without illustrations and heraldry. As such it was an obvious source to draw on especially if the editor-copyist-publisher did not know much about the subject matter himself, but still wanted to fill out or broaden the coverage. Especially the segments on bishops and imaginary arms were popular subjects. Richental might be the first to have assigned coats of arms to fictitious persons from literature on a large scale. At least this author has not found many arms for the heathen countries and from travellers' novels in any sources dated earlier – see chapter 8-9 for further discussion.

A non-exhaustive survey in Clemmensen OM and in various manuscripts and books indicate that the chronicle is the primary, if not the only source of the printed Virgil Solis Wappenbuchlein (VSW, Nürnberg, 1555) and of Martin Schrott's Wappenbuch (QDS, München, 1576) as well as having provided several fragments and individual arms to the German armorials of Jörg Rugen (RUG), Konrad Grünenberg (GRU), Miltenberg (MIL), Donaueschingen (DWF), Uffenbach (UFF), Berliner (BLW), Ansbacher (ANS), Vigil Raber's Neustifter (VRN) and several other armorials. More surprising is the fact that some imaginary kings are present in the French armorial dit de l'heraut Charolais: KCR: 178 is copied as CHA: 1042 'jean r. de suede', and KCR: 183 is CHA: 1047 'alexander of denmark'.

Most of the German armorials belong to the Miltenberg group, which are characterized by having similar types of content, e.g. kingdoms & principalities, quarternionen, ternionen, imaginary realms and the nobility - either, as is the norm, in subgroups by rank, or by tournament societies, the latter often being restricted to the lower nobility, Freiherren and Ritter. Any talk of ordering coats of arms by a 'quaternionenprincip' (Mathiessen KK, Wacker KK) is sheer nonsense. In no surviving armorial are the arms arranged by 'fours' only of any group, though a segment of Quaternionen is present in most members of the Miltenberg group of armorials, but including a segment is quite different from the ordering of a whole composite armorial – see chapter 9 for further discussion.

The kind and degree of reuse may be estimated from the following summaries, with more data available in Clemmensen OM and in the references to the individual items:

VSW, Virgil Solis Wappenbuchlein, München 1555. This woodcut book has 405 arms in 15 segments, including higher clergy from KCR, 36 quaternionen, 6 ternionen, kings and imaginary arms from KCR, dukes, counts, bannerets and lords, also from KCR.

QDS, Martin Schrott's Wappenbuch, München 1576. This woodcut book has 527 arms including higher clergy and abbeys from or named in KCR, towns from KCR. Some principalities and territories might not have been copied from KCR.

VRN, Vigil Rabers Neustifter Wappenbuch, manuscript 1550 with 1562 arms. On pp.79-94 most of the imaginary arms are from KCR.

4. Evaluation of entries – editorial principles

This edition, which has 1683 numbered items or entries, is based on the incunable printed by Anton Sorg of 1483 (vs. D), as it is the largest with 1210 items and is readily available on the internet. The additional entries follow the main series, and are numbered in subseries according to their presence in the various manuscripts. Due to the limitations in the database which was used to manage the blazons and comments on the individual items, the 'extras' are numbered in the 6000-subseries for the Konstanzer-Rosengarten ms. K, with most of the items having parallel entries in the other mss. The other major sources of 'extras' are ms. A (7000 subseries) and ms. P (8000 subseries) with very few in ms. W (9000 subseries), ms. G (4000 subseries), and vs. S (5000 subseries). Note that the 'extras' come in disjunct sequences, e.g. 7491-7512 {4 items}.

4.1 The present structure

Because of the need to mark their affiliation the items have been assigned to 20 segments (largely defined by the structure of vs. D) and cover six different areas, each discussed in separate chapters.

The first area, the narrative, consisting of mainly miniatures with some arms inserted into the text, is collected into segment 1 and placed in a separate listing, and a note for the (moved) items inserted into the main listing.

The second area, the clergy, comprises segments 2 popes (8756-8768), 3 cardinals (108-143, 6081-6101, 7061-7090, 8125-8164), 4 members of the conclave (45-74), 5 bishops (85-89, 305-453, 4226, 6152-6322, 7190-7357, 8180-8281, 9310), 6 abbots (488-523, 3516, 7367-7377, 81019), 7 canons (524-563, 7399-7425), 8 religious orders (454-473, 4311, 7439), and 9 universities (474-487).

The third area, the nobility, follows the traditional order of rank of medieval armorials, segment 10 kings (167-190, 208-209, 566-571, 7932, 8739), 11 electors (583-588, 6001-6007, 6447), 12 dukes (589-641, 6460, 6484, 7491-7512 {4}, 8408-8852 {7}, 9450), 13 princely counts (664-688, 7541, 6497-6506 {7}), 14 counts (689-784, 6516-6649 {51}, 8340-8967 {6}, 9550), 15 barons (785-842, 6662-6735 {27}, 8448, 8483), 16 gentry/untitled nobles (642-663, 843-1132, 6739-6891 {15}, 7735-7802 {8}, 8370-8936 {44}), and the unusual 17 ladies (572-582, 6442, 6443, 7468).

The remaining three areas are: segment 18 ternionen (146-166, 191-193, 8720-8755 {9}), 19 imaginary realms (194-304, 6380, 7856-7914 {11}, 8677-8830 {15}), and 20 towns (1133-1210).

4.2 Blazons

For the individual items, the reader will find the coat-of-arms blazoned in dictionary form, with the colours and figures separated. The colour of the field is mentioned first, followed by the figures in order of size and importance. For chiefs the field presides over the chief, while others, e.g. per fess, are ranged from the top and dexter side.

The blazons used here are not intended to provide the details necessary for recreating the armorial. They are a part of my Ordinary of medieval armorials, and as such only intended to facilitate identification and present the key features of the arms and crests. Through the ages artists have varied their work by changing details and presentation of figures, e.g. having the shields vertical or inclined. Some differences can be peculiar to regions, e.g. in Anglo-French regions some arms are usually blazoned as a chief , while in German-Flemish regions they are mostly blazoned as per fess. Roses and cinquefoils are generally interchangeable, the Anglo-French preferring foils and the German-Flemish the rose. For the details of figures omitted here, the reader is referred to the common practices of colouring crowns, beaks, claws as well as parts of roses, leaves and stems, usually discussed in textbooks or see Clemmensen OM.

Corroboration of the relation between a coat-of-arms and a family or office holder would usually come from seals, another armorials or from one or more of the standard collections of arms, mainly Crollalanza DH, Rolland / Rietstap, Dictionary of British Arms (DBA), Myslivěcek E, the old (SIE, Sieb Si/SiSu) or new (Sieb) Siebmacher, McCarthy EH, Anselme, Chesnaye-Desbois, Jougla de Morenas. Some of the above have biographical information as well. Arms of dioceses were rarely available outside England and Germany. Where possible circular references have been avoided. They are notably present in Rietstap / Rolland and the old Siebmacher editions.

4.3 Spelling of names and places

Variations and mistakes in the reading and spelling of names (e.g. c/t, x/r/p, i/u/n/m; Latin/German) and transposition of legends as well as in assigning coats of arms to the various people coming to Konstanz are common in the various editions of Richental's chronicle, and not uncommon in the various documentary sources printed in e.g. Hardt KK and Finke KK. The mistakes are multiplied as the editions are the result of several generations of copying by scribes and artisans, not necessarily knowledgeable or interested in the heraldry. The unfortunate consequence of this is that a substantial number of items are nearly impossible to identify, name properly and substantiate, especially for the clerics. The reader must judge the appropriateness of the assignments for him- or herself. Most of the references given for each item document different aspects of the assignment.

For clerics, the major assignment of an item is the diocese or abbey, disregarding the forename of the incumbent if necessary. If an identifiable coat of arms is available, this information will usually override the diocese named in the legend. The incumbent of a diocese is mainly taken from Eubel HC or Gams SE, and his presence in Konstanz from the list of Dacher (actually one of the versions made by Richental), Brandmüller KK or Finke KK. Their family and careers are taken from either of the above or biographical notes, incl. Crollalanza DH, Siebmacher (vol. 8 Bishops), Stokvis and Europäische Stammtafeln (ESNF).

4.4 Identification and comments

The identification of the owner of the coat-of-arms is kept to the bare minimum, giving – if possible – the family name and main seat or province of origin or living. The various branches are only mentioned if the references contain specific information, and some notes might be misleading as to the actual branch involved. References to seals and to other armorials are selective, for many items more examples are available in Clemmensen OM, in the references given, and/or in editions of the respective armorials. If judged trustworthy some references are secondary and not examined personally, usually due to lack of availability. Where it has been possible to identify a named individual, or propose a family member living at the time of collation, key details of his life are provided.

The abbreviations used for marche d'armes and regions follow Raneke BHM as in Clemmensen OM. The reader ought to be aware that the territorial borders of the regions covered have changed substantially since the Middle Ages both as a consequence of wars and modern administrative reforms. If possible the regionality of the family is given in modern terms, though at the time the now French Alsace/Elsass was part of (imperial) Germany and its Rhenian parts closely integrated with the territory Schwaben – an ancient duchy, but dormant for centuries. Schwaben is here used almost synonymously with modern Land Baden-Württemberg. The South-Western part of Bayern once belonged to Schwaben and items might be noted as Swabian or Bavarian, depending on the source used for reference. The northern part of Baden-Württemberg around Heidelberg was once part of the Kurfürstentum/electorate of Pfalz – and will be noted as paLatine. Though ruled by the Swiss federation from the 14th century and noted as belonging to modern Schweiz/Switzerland, much of the territory was then regarded as Swabian, Alsatian or Germano-Austrian. So many families which later came into prominence in e.g. Austria, incl. the Habsburgs, will be noted as Swiss. However, the context will guide the reader to the territorial closeness of several families irrespective of the territorial affiliation used. Similar conditions apply to the borderlands of modern Rheinland-Pfalz and Hessen, not to mention the small principalities like Brabant, Geldern/Guelders, Mark, Berg and the then 'independent' prince-bishoprics of Köln/Cologne etc., now in Nordrhein-Westphalen or Belgium. Neither should one forget that by the late Middle Ages many families had already moved away from the region of their original seat or Stammsitz. As can be gathered from the above, the language and terminology of the territory covered will be used interchangeably with English terms. The dates have largely been left as encountered. Please note that some dates might be in Old Style, which in England had the numbered year starting 25/3.

Armorials are specified with 3-letter standardized sigla, as proposed in Clemmensen OM. Blazons significantly different from the item discussed are always marked with an asterisk (*), and has the tinctures and legend noted, if relevant.

5. The Narrative

Irrespective of the placing of the individual items and segments in the various manuscripts and printed versions, the chronicle has been divided into two parts: The narrative with 191 coats-of-arms placed individually or in miniatures make up segment 01, while the remainder are consigned to the armorial proper. The miniatures as well as the individual arms come in different sequences in the manuscripts, but have been ordered as 121 entries in chronological order as presented and numbered in Wacker KK 1:342-353, but only 48 of these have coats-of-arms (App. D).

It falls outside the scope of this edition to summarize or discuss the narrative as such, but in short the arms in the narrative emphasize the town mayors and selected notables – lay as well as spiritual – who took part in the more splendid manifestations.

In summary, there are 16 individual arms in vs. D with an additional 7 in mss. A & K & W, and one in vs. S. Of the 169 arms in miniatures, only 60 found their way into the printed vs. D. Wacker KK vol. 2 presents b/w reproductions of several miniatures as well as the art historians' comments, and both vs. D and mss. P & K are available in facsimile.

5.1 The arms placed singly

The separate presentation of the arms in the narrative begins with the individual arms, and notably with those of the town of Konstanz, the 'publisher' Gebhard Dacher, his wife Ursula Achtpigin, and Johannes Schwarzach the mayor of 1415. Later follow other town dignitaries, some of which also were mayors during the concilium: Mangold, Ulm, Hagen, Ehinger, Mundbrot and Humbolt. Three popes are noted: Gregory XII (Correr), Benedict XIII (Luna) and Martin V (Colonna). Lastly, the arms of three noted churchmen who died in Konstanz during the council are entered close to the mentioning of their funeral rites: Bandello Bandelli Cardinal Sta.Balbina, Robert Hallum Bp. Salisbury, and Francisco Zabarella cardinal dit de Florence.

5.2 The miniatures

Matthiessen (p.184) and Feger has grouped the illustrations in ms. K tematically into seven situations: 1) the preliminaries, K: 5r-13r; 2) town life, K: 23r-25r; 4) the flights of pope Johannes XXIII and Friedrich of Austria, K: 42r, 46v-47r; 5) the processes and excution of Hus and Hieronimus of Prag, K: 57v-59v; 6) the enfeofments, K: 47v, 73v-80r; 7) the conclave and festivities on the election of pope Martin V, 86v-106r; separated by various ceremonies in 3) K: 32v-41r, 49v-53v, 61v-0v, 81v-82v, and 120r-122r. But note that there are several illustrations not in ms. K, and that some versions of a miniature have coats-of-arms while other versions do not have them. In several cases the miniatures with arms are part of a series illustrating an event – as indicated in the overview in Appendix D.

Most of the persons shown in the miniatures can be identified from either their arms or from being mentioned in the text. However, there are a few identifications that are tentative. There are generally more arms in the ms. P miniatures, but except for #33-34-35 the selection of persons is similar in all manuscripts. For #33 ms. A has the principal citizens of Konstanz, while the others have the principal local nobles. In #34 the selection was probably identical, but ms. A has several blank shields and there is an inversion of colours giving either Weinsberg, Urslingen or Rappolstein – all present.

The celebration of the Greek mass (#110) documents the mistake by Johan Siebmacher (SIE:12n10) and his followers until today (http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Bishopric_of_Cammin) of designating the housemark type coat-of-arms [84, 326, a.o.] as the arms of the medieval diocese of Kammin, presently in Polish Pommerania slightly east of the Oder river. It is probably the clan hrb. of Gregor Camblakas, the orthodox Abp. Kiev. The actual arms of Kammin, Argent cross gules, are in [363].

6. The Clergy

Though the four years at Konstanz were also used for a meeting of the Reichstag, the principal agenda was the ending of the Great Schism of the Roman Church. Consequently the most important players would be members of the ecclesiastical estate, and they were many and varied. Inclusion of clerics in an armorial was also a novelty for both author and the intended audience for the armorial and difficult to fit into the order of ranks and nationality usually used for the listing of secular nobility. Not only did some church provinces cover more than one sovereign territory, but there were also incumbents of the different obediences and the secular and ecclesiastical positions held by several attendees, and not least Richental was not always sure of what name and title to use for a particular coat of arms. Richental and the later copyist-editors used two approaches to give a simple overview over and a coherent structure to the clergy. For the earliest edition (vs. X, >1424, mss. A & P) Richental used the traditional listing of church provinces, while for the next edition (vs. R, >1431, ms. G & vs. D) this was substituted by the widely circulated official lists of participants or Teilnehmerlisten (Matthiessen KK 167, Wacker KK 39). The mss. K & W are later modifications of vs. R.

Richental had several opportunities to copy both. Not only did he take part in the collection and making of the official lists of arrivals and departures, but he had very good contacts to both town, imperial and ecclesiastical officials during and after the Council. As Matthiessen KK 158-167 has demonstrated, his major reference must have been the Liber Cancellariae Apostolicae edited around 1380 by Dietrich von Nieheim (1340-1418; Erler DN), who was in Konstanz and is named by Richental (ref). The book was in common use up to 1417 as a guide, not a set of rules. In copying Nieheim he reused the Latin terms and expanded some paragraph with comments in German on the contemporary situation. This served as a good structure on which to add arms and names of participants, but maybe the result became too cumbersome.

The clerics' attendance was high: 29 cardinals, 3 patriarchs, 33 archbishops and 150 bishops have been enumerated, a total of 215 (Catholic Encyclopedia, www), which compares well with the 254 entries (doubles inclusive) in KCR segments 03 and 05. Only 150 bishops were included in the printed vs. D. Though the assignment of first names and sometimes spelling of titles and surnames is problematic throughout the KCR, the major problem area of identification of arms and owner names is restricted to the bishops in segment 05.

6.1 Cardinals and other members of the Conclave

Apart from the short segment in ms. P (02, P756-P768) of the popes from Urban V (Grimoard, r. 1362-1370) to Paul II (Barbo, r. 1464-1471) and the popes dismissed at Konstanz, the highest rank represented is the cardinals in segment 03 and - except for ms. P - the representatives of the five Nationes forced upon the cardinalate for the conclave of 1417 (04).

Except for a bit of confusion of names and the fusion of two coats-of-arms in P757 the papal arms are essentially correct. Interestingly, the lead item of segment 02 is the arms of the then perpetual guardians of the conclaves, the Roman Savelli family.

The arms of most of the cardinals [108-143] are correct, except for a Spaniard [123], arms misattributed to Tommaso Brancaccio [134] and a few unconfirmed [139, 141]. The cardinals have been entered twice in ms. A [A61-A90; A151-A189].

The arms of the six representatives from each of the five Nationes are grouped in all versions (omitted in ms. P) and without legends in ms. A. The sequence of the Germans and the English is similar in vs. D & ms. G and ms. A, as is the sequence of the French and Italians in vs. D & ms. G and mss. K & W, while the remaining groups are slightly shuffled, but this was probably due to different orders of reading during copying. More serious is the transposition of legends and uncertain arms among [47-49, 58, 67-68, 74] which makes it impossible to ascribe the arms with any certainty. One may doubt whether some of the doctores, e.g. Conrad from Soest and Nicolaus from Dinkelsbühl, actullay used arms.

6.2 Bishops and dioceses

A modern and particular researcher is rightly appalled by the quality of reporting of segment 05. Both Dacher and Richental have a large proportion of hardly decipherable titles and several dignities are wrong, and some bishops were noted as archbishops. Among the easily verifiable entries, about half have the Christian name right. But misattributions were not uncommon features in medieval and early modern reporting.

The confused naming of the bishops and the often unintelligible spelling of the names of the dioceses have been noted by the earlier commentators, who also noted that the listing included bishops who were known to be absent in person as well as by proctors. To this we may add that only about a quarter of the coats-of-arms can be verified as belonging to the person in the legend. This is in part due to the limited number of books on seals and heraldry available to the present author, and in part to the fact that relatively few dioceses in France (Bouye HM) and probably also in Italy and Spain had diocesan arms. The confusion might well have been caused by Richental (and Dacher) having the dioceses, incumbents and their arms in different files, only connected by numbers. Whatever the reason is for the confusion, it appears that all coats-of-arms in this segment really belong to clergymen (mostly as family arms), and are not mixed with the laity. Identification of some items was attempted by Berchem for the 1923-facsimile of vs. D, and by Zimmermann in 1937 and 1939 for the Swiss and Germans based on mss. K & A & vs. D, generally followed and amended by Laszloczky in 1974 for the Italians based on all versions. However, for both the three previous and the present attempt, the result is merely a presentation and discussion of candidates, except for most Germans and Englishmen. With the bishops in three different sequences, we must also select the most informative and – hopefully- the parent one.

For the bishops, ms. A is probably as close as we can get to Richental's first ordering as it follows Nieheim’s Provenciales, a semi-official survey of c.1380 much used by the papal officials. We must assume that the bishops have been rearranged for mss. G & P, though mistakes are likely to have been introduced already when arms were being added to the Richental copy of the Provenciales.

Except for some shuffling of fragments and individual items, mss. K & W are identical to ms. A, probably due to different reading during copying. The three major break points (K165|174, K176|169, K173|177) are similar, though ms. W have two additional transposed fragments (W141rv, W140rv) and mixing of items on W142rv. Item K206/W194 Würzburg has been moved from between Chur and Worms to between Köln and Liege. Mss. P and D & G are in different order, except for at few subfragments in similar sequence (D72r, D129r-131r2, and some sets of 2-3 items).

The listing of bishops in ms. A begins at the bottom of page 327 following Pope Benedict XIII (Luna) and a Spanish cardinal [123], and continues on page 328 with another three unidentified Spanish bishops. Two of these, Johannes [A190] and Didacus [397/A192], both from Aragon, have the same attribution camerensis, which is not found in neither Eubel nor Gams. Then follows three pages describing the Church in the World, several pages with arms of Italian bishops, then French bishops, more Italians, Germans, Hungarians, Poles, Austro-Germans, more French, some Italians, some Spanish and at last the English and a few orthodox bishops. The first Spanish fragment (A328n) has been omitted in the other surviving mss.

The structure may be exemplified with the subsegment in ms. A: 332n-333n1 corresponding to the 14 suffragan dioceses listed on Nieheim fo. 12v for the archdiocese of Ravenna [327/A194]. There are 6 coats-of-arms (ravenen, adrien, benconen*, saxacen, rabien*, porien*) followed by list of 9 bishops: thomacen*, formilen, cerinien, foropopulen, thesarencen*, imolen, mutinen, reginen, saxien. Four names could be misreadings of Nieheim: rabien/Ferrara, porien/Parma, thomacen/Commachio, benconen/Bologna. However nice the list of dioceses appears to be, the only item verified [405/A195] is for Giacomo Bertucci d'Obizzi Bp.Adria. Two other items might be for a Danish Bp. Ribe [332/A198] and a French Bp. Mirepoix [K152/A199].

As noted above most arms in the segment must belong to bishops, but a few were borrowed from the collection of abbots, e.g. Ottobeuren, Klosterneuburg and Reitenhaslach [383, 403, 446]. The genuine episcopal arms belong mostly to the Germans, Poles and English and a few of the more prominent members – including bishops represented by proctors, who must have displayed the arms of their superiors.

The listings of bishops (and their arms) given by Richental and by Gebhard Dacher were commented on by Lenfant KK in 1727 and Hardt KK in 1696 (revised 1700). They have also been reused for several later armorials, e.g. the Miltenbach (MIL), by Jörg Rugen / Georg Rixner (RUG), Martin Schrot (QDS) and in the Wappenbüchlein printed by Virgil Solis in 1555 (VSW). For many items these later authors added to the confusion, e.g. giving the diocese of Salisbury the personal arms of bishop Hallum [348].

6.3 Abbots and canons

In three of the surviving manuscripts (mss. G & P & A) Richental (or Dacher) included members of the intermediate clergy (06, 07). Foremost the abbots of the local monasteries, members of which must have been well-known to the merchants of Konstanz. To these were added a few of the more prominent abbots, e.g. the abbot of Citeaux, the principal Cistercian monastery, Friedrich abbot of St.Gans (Szegszed in Hungary, later Bp. Augsburg) and the abbot of Melk in Austria [510, 509, 504]. The arms of these were easily identified, not least from the works of Zimmermann. There are a number of unidentified abbots and also of blank shields with legends only. Some of their arms, e.g. Ochsenhausen, must have been known, but not entered.

The abbatical arms of the Germans are mostly quartered with the monastic arms in Q1+Q4 and the family arms in Q2+Q3. The typical abbot's seals would usually have a figure of an abbot between arms of institution dx and family sn, but Zimmermann WS 121 notes that the seal from 1408 of Eberhard von Kirchberg Bp. Augsburg was quartered as was the painted exlibris of Johan von Egloffstein Bp. Würzburg (r. 1400-1411), possibly as a result of the changing style into broader shields. A pattern used by bishops would rapidly have been adopted by the infuled abbots as both had their seats in the Reichstag and synodes.

The second group, included in the same three manuscripts, are Konstanzer canons from the leading families of the town. A few have only their names mentioned. For both groups there are more names in the listings.

6.4 Religious orders

As for the abbots, the mss. G & P & A have a segment (08) of the principal men of the monastic orders. Most items refer to regional commanders (Komthuren) of the Teutonic Order, who due to their dispute with Poland and Lithuania had a large embassy at the Council. In addition, there is the arms of Philippe de Naillac, grand master of the other military order (of Saint John or of Rhodes), and of Hugo (XIV) von Montfort-Bregenz, the local commander of O.St.John [457]. For two items [456, 460] the versions cannot agree on the affiliation: O.T. or O.St.J.

Several of the non-military orders, Dominicans, Augustines, Franciscans a.o., are represented by the heads of their order, and with non-armorial shields or legends only. One [458] appears to have family arms (not identified). With the exception of the grand masters and some entries in the Armorial Lyncenich, the members of the Teutonic Orders as a rule gave up the use of family arms upon entering the order. This obviously did not include the commanders outside Prussia, e.g. Ulrich Zenger [461].

6.5 Universities

The segment on universities (09) has been hailed as having the first representation of arms of these grand institutions. This is the case for the University of Oxford [487]. However, the other universities' arms might be imaginary. Most have a book as their central emblem, which Richental might have cleverly combined with either the arms of the university's parent town or sovereign.

In the case of Paris [474], the arms are presently exhibited on the main building of the University of Queensland (Australia), but not used by Sorbonne or other Parisian institutions, and not found in any of the collections of seals consulted. The references at hand do not allow for any conclusions on this point. The University of Buda was short-lived, and there is no other representation of its purported arms [478]. The present arms have reintroduced the arm holding a book, which might be interpreted as the Bible, the Liber privilegiorum or just symbol of learning (Berténi 11).

7. Rulers and nobles

As the concilium proceedings were purely a church affair, the laymen took no direct part in the discussions during the sessions. But the schism was very much a political problem with the various realms and principalities giving obedience to any of the three popes claiming supremacy of the church. Though Sigismund, as king of the Romans and co-host of the concilium, was the only crowned head-of-state present, all European rulers and many princes, city states and towns did send embassies to Konstanz. With two wars (the Anglo-French Hundred Years' War, the Baltic Crusades between the Teutonic Order and Poland-Lithuania) and several internal conflicts raging, there must have been ample room for political debate and intrigue among the attendees. With the many German nobles present a Reichstag was also held and offices distributed and a few nobles elevated to a higher rank. Last, but not least, there was pageantry. Tournaments, formal parades and dances were held, and on the darker side, heretics were burned at the stake. The judgement might be given by the church, but the execution was carried out by the lay authorities and the spectacle was for all to enjoy.

Richental was fascinated by the many nobles present and made great efforts to record both their names and arms, and it made no difference to him whether the dignitary was present in person or represented by an emissary. For this he utilized whatever lists of comings and goings were available and also the help of some of the many heralds present. His own structuring of his notes was conventional, the nobles grouped by rank: kings, electors, dukes, counts, barons, and untitled nobility. He even observed that the counts might come in princely and 'ordinary' grades. However, there is no indication that he recognized any precedence within these groups. A rare novelty was his inclusion of the names and arms of a few ladies, probably because of their prominent placing during the pageantry.

After the festivities were over and he sat down to compile his chronicle, he must have recognized that his notes were defective relatively to what he intended to have. He might have the surname and rank, but for many he did not have their personal name, and no means to get them. So he made them up, often choosing common German names or a name used by other rulers, e.g. Wenzelas and Johan.

7.1 Rulers and their embassies

All Christian, i.e. obedient to either of the popes, kingdoms are represented. The 32 items for royal sovereigns in segment 10 of vs. D can be split into 3 subsegments. The last [566-571] is common only to vs. D and ms. G and represent the principal territories of Sigismund, including Brandenburg. In mss. K&W three of these coats-of-arms have been moved to the first and main subsegment.

The main subsegment [167-190] gives not only the Christian kingdoms with fairly correct arms and often garbled names, but adds 5 imaginary arms for territories which, except for Scotland, have a questionable status. Two, Bosnia and Galicia, are rightly placed in segm.19 in ms. P with the other imaginary arms for the fabulous kingdoms. The arms attributed to Scotland (or Ireland) are confused with arms used by the Schottenkloster, abbeys founded in Southern Germany by Irish monks.

The third subsegment [208-209] is curious. The two arms must have been inserted by the vs. D editor, and copied later by Vigil Raber. One is attributed to the Queen of Napoli, Giovanna II (r. 1414-1435), but the arms are those of Réné d'Anjou (1409-1480), the princely romantic author and titular king of Sicily. The other item is the proper arms of Christoffer III 'the Bavarian' of Denmark (r. 1440-1448), a Wittelsbacher nephew of his predecessor.

7.2 The higher nobility

The higher nobility is defined here as the electors (segm. 11), dukes (segm. 12), and princely counts (segm. 13). The seven electors lead mss. K & A & W, which together with vs. D and ms. G have another subsegment [583-588] of the four lay electors and some dukes of Bayern and Austria, leading on to the next segment. Surprisingly there is separate set of electors in ms. P.

Both vs. D and ms. G have 53 dukes [589-641] beginning with a page of Wittelsbachers, while mss. K & A & W have a concordant set of 33, omitting most items from D. Berry [617] on. The 41 items of ms. P are in a sequence different from both previous concordances.

The individual dukes come in no structural order, mixing Germans with foreigners. A few duchies, like Montbéliard al. Mömpelgard [P850] had been absorbed by other princes, but most dukes would either have been present in person or by ambassadors – and most have their proper arms. There is one curious item [639] among the unnamed arms on vs. D: 180r and ms. G: 139v: the arms of Luxembourg impaling Woodville, which must be a later insert by the ms. G editor. Jacquetta of Luxembourg (1416-1472) was the widow of John D.Bedford, the English regent of France, and shortly after his death in 1435 she secretly married his handsome squire Richard Woodville (1405-1469). Richard later made a name for himself as a jouster, soldier and diplomat and was ennobled as a baron – and after their daughter Elisabeth in 1466 married king Edward IV he was created E. Rivers.

The items noted as Gefürstete Grafen or princely counts are grouped like the dukes. There are 25 items in vs. D & ms. G, 30 in mss. K & A & W, and in a third sequence 25 in ms. P. Some were more or less independent territorial rulers, others were merely relatives of dukes or noted nobles, e.g. Bartolo Osini [675] a noted papal condottiere and marshal (chief policeman) of the concilium, or the exiled Scala brothers [K805-K806]. The principal English lay emissary Richard Beauchamp E. Warwick [668] was one of those elevated to be among the marquises.

7.3 The Wittelsbacher family

For a non-specialist it is hard to keep track of the many members of the Wittelsbach family mentioned in the chronicle. At the time of the council various branches held three major principalities and all were also noted as Herzogen von Bayern or Dukes of Bavaria, as all male members of a German family inherited their father's title and the family arms, Bayern qtg Pfalz. One branch held the counties of Holland-Hainaut, another was elector-paLatine of the Rhine (Kf.Pfalz), while the third branch ruled various parts of Bayern.

In ancient times the family head held the title of paLatine or Pfalzgraf of Wittelsbach & Bayern, being created duke in 1180. The major split came in 1329 with the Hausvertrag von Pavia where the Emperor Ludwig IV (1287-1347) and his great nephews Rudolf (II, o.s. P.1353) and Rupprecht (II, 1325-1398) agreed to divide their lands. The Ludolfinger branch had Bayern and the Rudolfingers had the electorate, Pfalz-bei-Rhein and Oberpfalz, which Rupprecht (III, 1352-1410, Dt. Kg. 1400) inherited.

The four sons of Rupprecht (III) were Stefan of Zweibrücken (d. 1459, [591]), Johan von Oberpfalz (d. 1461), Adolf Gf. Berg & Jülich and Ludwig (III, 1378-1436) Kf. Pfalz, protector of the council [585]. They all also were known as Hz. Bayern & PfGf. Rhein.

The Ludolfinger branch, grandsons of Ludwig IV, became subdivided into the München, Ingolstadt and Landshut sublines. Stefan (III, d. 1413) and his son Ludwig (VII, 1365-1447, []) held Ingolstadt. Isabella, Queen of France, was the sister of Stefan (III), and Ludwig (VII) lived at the French court for many years. Ernst (1373-1438, [593]) and Wilhelm (II, 1375-1435, [592]), nephews of Stefan (III) were Hz. Bayern-im-München. Another nephew, Heinrich (IV, 1386-1450, [590]) held Bayern-Landshut. The counts of Holland-Hainaut were also Ludolfinger Hz. Bayern-Straubing. Three sons of Ludwig IV succeed as MGf. Brandenburg from 1324 to 1373. All could be mentioned as Hz. Bayern and PfGf. Rhein.

The armorial has two sets of rather confusing combinations of the arms of Bayern, Mark and Kleve in the 'Ladies' segment' [579-582, K442-K443] referring to the marriage of Stefan (III).

7.4 The middle nobility

The lesser titled or middle nobility consists of the remaining counts (segm. 14) and barons or Freiherren (segm. 15). It is interesting that there are more counts (155) than barons (86). The barons, 58 in vs. D & ms. G, 81 in mss. K & A & W, 55 in ms. P, are with one exception all Germanic, i.e. either from present Germany, Austria, Schweiz, Alsace-Lorraine or Czechia. The odd one is the Hungarian marshal Peter Czeh Lévai Hr.Brisinicz & Capelstein al. Stechpeter von Schara von Toppelstein (o.s. P.m.1440), present among both the counts [K657] and barons [791] and of Bohemian descent. No independent evidence for the arms of more than a dozen of the barons could be found.

As for the higher nobility the German and foreign counts are mixed and in three different sequences: 96 in vs. D & ms. K, 139 in mss. K & A with 103 in ms. W (omitting ms. K: 143rv), and 91 in ms. P. One reason for this difference in numbers is that mss. G and vs. D group several members of a family into a single item, while mss. K & A & W have individual items for each member, e.g the many Montforts. Important nobles such as Württemberg [689], Cilly [706] and the principal Hungarian officials of Sigismund can be found in this segment, as can the arms of Habsburg – sold to Zürich and resold to canton Aargau. About a dozen familes have not been verified, including the Krawaten [729, K594-K595], known to have been married into the Cilly.

7.5 The Montfort family

The leading family on the northern and eastern shore of the Bodensee was the Montforts, a group of very distant cousins (ESNF 12:47-55). They were cadets of the ancient Gf. Tübingen, paLatines or Pfalzgrafen of Schwaben, known 1080, serving as deputies of the Hz.Schwaben and having the gonfanon as their figure-of-arms. Hugo (II) Gf. Tübingen married c.1170 the heiress Elizabeth Gfn. Bregenz and one of their sons acquired her lands by 1208, including Burg Montfort near Götsis in Vorarlberg. The Montfort branch separated again in 1234 into the senior Werdenberg & Sargans line and a junior Tettnang line. The Tettnang line split 1374 into the Bregenz & Pfannenberg and Tettnang & Rotenfels lines. Hugo (I) von Werdenberg became Gf. Heiligenberg in 1277, and his descendants at one time adopted the bend dancetty as their arms, while his brother Hartmann (I) took the title of Sargans in 1260.

In the armorial, five coats-of-arms can be related to the Tübingen-Montforts. Both the Werdenberg [K56] and the Tettnang lines [95, K16, K54] are represented in the miniatures. The extinct subline of Herrenberg (Tübingen) in [955] has the Gules a gonfanon or, while the representative of Tübingen zu Lichteneck [723] inverts the colours.

The Montforts-in-Tettnang all have Argent a gonfanon gules [745]. The named members are Hugo (IX) in Pfannenberg [768], his nephews of Bregenz: Wilhelm (V) in [K556] and Hugo (XIV) in Dacher L 34; and their cousins the brothers Rudolf (V) and Wilhelm (IV) [K555, K557].

The Werdenberg-Sargans have Gules a gonfanon argent for the brothers Rudolf, Johan (II) and Heinrich (VII) in [734, K540, K541], though Rudolf (VIII), son of Johan might be the one intended. The Argent bend dancetty sable of Werdenberg-Heiligenberg is used for the brothers Albrecht (IV) and Albrecht (V) and their nephews Rudolf (VII) and Hugo (V) in [717, K536, K537, K538], while it is probably Albrecht (V) who has the Werdenberg qtg Heiligenberg in [P352].

The unusual Sable a gonfanon argent in [732] and Argent-sable in the corresponding mss. K & A was probably for Hugo (V). This variant was also attributed to Asperg (Tübingen) and to Feltkirch and Glappach.

7.6 The lower nobility

The 379 items in segm. 16 are either titled Herr or untitled, but several items are unnamed. They would mostly be knights and squires serving in the retinues of the lords and embassies, or be landed nobles visiting. Some 200 items belong to families having their seats within 200 km of Konstanz, and 81 can reasonably be assigned to the retinues of Sigismund or foreign embassies. There are 312 items in the concordant vs. D & ms. G, 160 in ms. K concordant with ms. W except for those of ms. K:149rv omitted in W. The 110 items in ms. A are a slightly arythmic version of the items in ms. K, while the 281 items in ms. P come as an irregular version of vs. D, apart from omissions. As the numbers show, there are 68 items with no obvious parallel in vs. D. These can be viewed either as inserts in one of the mss. P & K & A & W, or as omissions in ms. G relatively to the other manuscripts.

The structure of the segment in vs. D may be broken down into some 10 subsegments depending on the criteria used. Between the dukes and the counts come three small groups, also present in ms. P: [642-645] Italians, [646-651] Bohemians, and [652-663] Poles. The main segment begins with a series of mainly Germans and Bohemians [843-862], also present in ms. P. The next two groups are present in all manuscripts: [863-910] Swabians and (presently) Swiss, and [911-940] mainly Swiss, i.e. from Aargau and Thurgau south of the Bodensee. Franconians make up [941-952] in vs. D and ms. P. Mixed Germans are in [953-1024] in vs. D and mss. K & W with very few in mss. P & A. The last two groups are [1025-1978] with Swabians, Swiss and Alsatians in vs. D and ms. P only, and practically all the foreigners are placed in [1079-1132], in vs. D and ms. P only.

There is one peculiar irregularity in the segment in vs. D: the archbishop of 'Ispalensis' [1103] which might be for the Aragonian family Ximenez de Urrea leading a page of Spaniards. Four items, the Hungarian Thebemur [663], the Czech Wartenberg and Blumenau [845, 856] and the German Heideck [8456] are moved to segments 14 (counts) or 15 (barons) in mss. K & W.

The untitled nobles in ms. P are placed in the range [P359-P663] with two subfragments of items inserted. The first are 12 items [P402-P413] of Germans and foreigners placed among the dukes and counts in vs. D and the second 60 items, a mix of barons and untitled nobles of vs. D.

With a few exceptions it has not been possible to verify the foreigners in [1079-1132] and about a score of the Germans.

7.7 Ladies

In ms. A:41n (Buck KCR 35) Richental describes the entry of Sigismund into Konstanz in the company of his Queen and second wife Barbara von Cilly, Elisabeth Queen of Bosnia (Anna in [574]) and Elisabeth Countess of Würtemberg (Anna in [577]). The other ladies are Anna von Braunsweig [576], wife of Friedrich (IV) von Habsburg of Austria, and a series of confounded arms [579-582, K442-K443], which may be associated with the late Stefan (III) of Bayern.

8. Ternionen

Ulrich Richental, or perhaps Gebhard Dacher, attached two sets of imaginary arms to the armorial listing of people attending or sending embassies to Konstanz. The major list, described in the next chapter, would demonstrate that all the world was attending this magnificent council held in their parent town. The smaller list of 33 items [146-166, 191-193, P720-721, P747-P755] including 3 repeats, presents the imagery of the Ternionen or three best of each as a allegory of knightly virtues and vices.

8.1 Personification of the virtues

The imagery is based on the magical number three, as found in arts (the Three Graces), constitutions (parlament, executive, judicial), behaviour (faith, hope, and charity), and life (youth, middle age, old age) &c. Though coats-of-arms were assigned to imaginary heroes from the early 13th century (Charlemagne), the first known occurrence of the triad: pagan law – Jewish law – Christian law was the French poem Voeux du paon or Vows of the peacock from 1312 by Jean de Longuyon. Law is here including virtues and commendable social behaviour.

Longuyon selected nine champions to represent the triads: Hector, Alexander, Caesar for the pagans; David, Joshua and Judas Maccabeus for the Jews; and Charlemagne, Arthur of Britain, and Godfrey of Bouillon for the Christians. This theme of the Nine worthies/Neuf preux/Neun Helden rapidly became a common and enduring theme in Western Europe, being repeated in artworks and literature throughout England, France, Germany, Spain and Italy. From time to time the worthies were in competition as well as in union with other real or fabulous groupings: e.g. the Knights of the Round Table, the Quaternionen, the Kurfürsten (electors), the Douze pairs de France (in Don Quixote vol. 1 ch.5*)* and the followers of Charlemagne.

The worthies as a whole personalize the facets of the perfect warrior: They are conquering heroes and rulers, who brought glory to their nations, attracted valiant followers and were known for their prowess in arms. They also embodied virtues held valuable by the upper classes of the time: courtesy, loyalty, prowess, hardiness, largesse, frankness, and above all: service to the country and the church. A fuller discussion of the lives and virtues of the individuals and the variations in imagery can be found in Clemmensen T and papers noted there.

Some time later, probably around the beginning of the 15th century, the triads expanded in two directions. The all-male worthies got female counterparts: ancient Roman heroines or amazons, biblical heroines from the Old Testament, and female saints. This direction can be followed in both France and Germany with extension of the virtues to self-sacrifice, religious devotion, and chastity. But where the male worthies (preux) were constant, nearly all artists chose their own set of females (preuses), and abandoned the basic law-triad idea. Even near contemporary notables became included, e.g. Joan of Arc and Bertrand du Guesclin.

Apart from the inclusion of the Three Magi, the second direction appears to be purely German. There several other triads were added, such as anointed kings, saintly persons, foreign princes (the sultan, Prester John) and more surprisingly the embodiment of vices in the persons of Nero and Nabucco.

8.2 Ternionen in the Richental chronicle

Ternionen was only appended to two of the surviving manuscripts, mss. G & P, and consequently in vs. D. The G-version of c.1470 by Dacher is the longer with 24 items in 3 sets. The first set [146-157] has 4 triads: the oldest arms (3 of the generals of the biblical king David), arms of Julius Caesar (a pseudo-triad), the 'dultigsten' or patient men, and the 'mildesten' or mild princes. The second set [158-166] is the Nine Worthies: three best Christians (Charlemagne, Godfrey of Bouillon, Arthur), Jews (David, Josua, Judas Macchabeus) and heathens (Hector, Alexander, Caesar). The third set is the Three Magi: Balthasar, Melchior and Casper.

The shorter P-version of 1464 also by Dacher omits the first set, retaining only the Nine Worthies [P747-P755] and the Three Magi [P720-P722], and surprisingly the imagery is different. For the magi the differences can be explained as a simple rearrangement of the arms of Balthasar and Casper, Melchior retaining his [193/P722]. The worthies present a more complex situation. Charlemagne retains his arms [158/P747], but Julius Caesar [151/P753] gets the bull's faces rather than the dragon of the slightly younger G-version or the imperial eagle suitable for the Ur-Emperor. The griffin moves between Alexander in ms. P and Judas in ms. G and crowns between Arthur in ms. P and Alexander in ms. G. The other worthies get totally different arms. Several items of ms. G are unique.

8.3 Ternionen as a tradition

Though a workshop error could explain the differences in the two sets of magi, this is not the whole story. Most representations of the magi have various combinations of the arms of [191-193] in the 17 armorials surveyed in Clemmensen T and one may divide them into four groups (KCR-G, STU, VRN, VSW, CHA; KCR-P, HBG; UFF, ING; GEL, BHM, GOR) with the other armorials (SGH; MIL; RUG) having a mix of the three arms (mullets, crescent and mullet, moor with banner) with either a sun-in-splendour, 3 crescents or 3 heads. The colour schemes might vary, e.g for CHA otherwise as KCR-G. The eldest representation (c.1400) can be found in the Gelre, which was largely imitated by the two sets in St.Gallen.

The variation in arms between the worthies is larger, 73 arms between 9 worthies, and varied: e.g. dragons being shared by Caesar, Josua and Judas; crowns by Arthur and Alexander, and bull's faces between Caesar and Josua. The dominant German tradition, both in armorials and decorations, can be found in KCR-G, RUG, DWF and VRN. There are variations in colour and detail, but the choice of figures-of-arms is generally the same. Some workshops draw on several sources and might substitute other arms: e.g. the cross of Jerusalem as the basic attribute for Godfrey of Bouilllon, the crusader-liberator of the holy city, but might be amended by the fess of Lotharingia or Brabant qtg Limbourg (for his home territory), or be replaced by the fleurs-de-lis of France. The crusaders who reached Jerusalem were mainly Franks or French speaking knights.

A fuller discussion of the lives and virtues of the individuals as well as the iconography can be found in Clemmensen T and in Wyss NH.

8. Imaginary realms

Imaginary arms, Phantasiewappen in German, are coats-of-arms attributed to legendary persons or realms and comparatively rare in most European armorials outside Germany. One may consider four types. The first is the fabulous kings & realms as discussed here; the Three Best of each kind (ternionen), with the Nine Worthies or Neuf Preux as a special case, as in segment 18 and the previous chapter; knights of the Arthurian romantic cycle; and followers of Charlemagne (incl. Douze pairs de France). The two latter types are not included in the Richental chronicle.

Fabulous kings and realms are rarely found in high numbers outside the German armorials, though there some 60 in Urfé (URF), 50 in each of Wijnberghen (WIN) and Vermandois (VER), some 20 in Zürich (ZUR) and usually less than a dozen in English armorials. Only in the armorial attributed to the heraut Charolais (CHA) do kings & realms reach the more than hundred found in the group of Southern German armorials.

Recording the embassies from the realms of the world, factual as well as fictional, was an essential part of Richental's attempt to glorify his hometown and the momentous occasion of the reunification of the Christian Church.

8.1 Sources for and copyists of the imaginary arms.

Though Richental himself or the artisans working for him must have made up a large part of the arms attributed to the realms, they selected the names from chronicles, novels and travellers' stories. Foremost among these are the travels of Marco Polo, the travels of John Mandeville and the Legenda Aurea of Jacob von Viatico al. Jacob di Voragine. But he or Dacher could also have used the reminiscences of Johan Schiltberger (b.1381), who was captured at Nicopolis in 1396 and served Turkish and Mongol rulers until he escaped in 1427 and resettled in Freisingen in the service of a Hz. Bayern. In addition several other writers, Ludolf von Sudheim, the 'Speculum historiales' of Vincentz von Beauvais and 'Historia trium regum' of Johan von Hildesheim, were common in the libraries of the wealthier Southern and Western German nobles and merchants (Ridder JM 339) and not rarely bound together in composite volumes, e.g. BSB cgm.267.

The works of Marco Polo (first published c. 1230, printed by Sorg in 1481), Mandeville (first published 1356, a novel rather than a traveller's report, drawing heavily on earlier works by Odoric of Pordenone a.o.) and Voragine (fl. 1275, in print 1470) were widely read at that time and available also in print. Several manuscripts of the Schiltberger memoir are known, and his story came in print already by 1475 (Telfer JS vii-xi). At least two volumes of Schiltberger bound with Marco Polo, Mandeville and Ulrich of Friaul (fl.1330) have survived, both made in Schwaben.

Several contemporary and later armorials have reused this material, notably those of Grünenberg and Hans Ingeram al. Codex Cotta (ING). The Uffenbach (UFF) is hard to date and might as likely have been a source as derivative. Both the KCR and others of the group manufactured in the workshops around the Bodensee appear to derive from a common set of sources. Though, for a large part of the items, no source of the coats-of-arms nor of their inspiration can be proposed with any certainty, the tradition of assigning arms to realms outside the western sphere of heraldic display must have begun early in the 15th century. Later artisans, e.g. those responsible for the armorials Miltenberg (MIL) and the one attributed to Jörg Rugen al. Georg Rüxner (RUG) have extensively reused the material commissioned by Richental and Grünenberg. And the tradition continued into the early 17th century both in manuscripts (Ortenburg, München, BSB, Cod. Icon. 308u, probably c. 1480 continued 1524; Überlingen, c. 1595; BSB, Cod. Icon. 333, added to from c. 1485-1696) and in print by Hans Burkmair (c. 1520) and Silvestro Petrasancta (1638).

8.2 Differences between versions

This segment of 136 coats-of-arms includes 109 items [194-304] of vs. D, a sketch in mss. K & W, 10 items noted under ms. A and 15 items in ms. P only, with none in vs. H. Apart from omissions the five primary versions have identical contents, though the actual order and lay-out divide them into three subgroups. The first subgroup is the usual vs. D and ms. G, though 3 folios (old ff.126-128, items 232-254) are missing between the present G: 88rv and G: 89rv. An additional difference is the absence in ms. G of [268-270], two for Armenia and one for Ydumia, probably another page lost between present ms. G fo.78 and 79. The two versions are otherwise identical page by page.

The mss. K and W are similarly identical page by page except for ms. K: 135v-136v [216-232] missing in W. Compared to ms. G, the two manuscripts, K & W, have more items to the page and have been rearranged with subfragments that largely correspond to the page breaks in ms. G.

Ms. P is with 104 items the longer of the two mss. in the third subgroup. The first part of it [P664-P686] exhibits nearly the same differences from vs. D (and ms. G) as does ms. K. However, the second part is different from any of the other mss. It also has 15 items only found here. Of the shorter ms. A (72 items) a large part is concordant with ms. K, while pages A: 477n-479n [A856-A887] are largely concordant with ms. P, and they have another 8 items in common. The present dating places ms. A as the older of the mss. One of the problems in establishing the pedigree is that several generations of manuscripts might be involved, and for each generation a copyist might read or select a fragment in a different way from the preceding fragment – or framed in less complimentary terms: the present author might have chosen to give the manuscript a different structure. As an example: the 6 items in [A844-A449] on ms. A: 475n correspond to both the three top items on ms. K: 130v and K: 132r and on vs. D: 113r and D: 115v [248-250, 265-267] or a reading per row of ms. P: 237v, entered here per column as this appeared most suitable for the segment.

8.3 Fantasy and disorder

The principal imaginary realm is that of the mythical priest-king Prester John of India [194-196] which leads the segment in all versions. The iconography is predictable: the cross, scales of justice and the lion & cross combination also found in various forms for Armenia, almost the last Christian outpost in Asia.

There is little attempt to arrange the items in any form of geographical order. What was done was to group a few items with similar names together (e.g. Armenia, India) or have a sequence of items

[210-226] based on Constantinople and Greece, which also included territories in North-Eastern Balkan. However, the several Armenia items are spread throughout the segment. as are those of India and Russia. It was only Conrad Grünenberg who many years later rearranged the imaginary realms into a route through Asia and Africa.

Apart from Armenia and a few others (e.g. Hungarian kings, Byzantines of Latin origin, Bulgaria, Lithuania) neither coats-of-arms nor arms-like insignia were used by the few items that might be associated with factual principalities. Four items have been proposed to derive from Irish chieftains [271-272, 274-275], which might or might not be a possible explanation. Canting or allusive arms are few: e.g. for the amazons, Griffonia, Edessa and Granada [198, 203, 257, 272, 285]. For most items rare but conventional figures-of-arms were used: e.g. fish heads, banners, crowns, elephants, chess rooks and bells. A few are very imaginative, e.g. the monster for Bethlehem [200], the wounds for Gog-Magog [197] and the saltire/chevron-chess rook-based ones for Bosnia [238] and Ethiopia [251, 300].

Many of the items are without any legend, others were derived from identifiable sources such as Mandeville, but a few appear to be mishearings or misreadings where known places in the vicinity were substituted, e.g. Scherffenberg [301], Ultingen [275] and Schiltach [P785]. Whatever the original sources were, the arms and the names lived on for hundreds of years, often separated and mixed by later copyists.

10. The towns

It is extremely rare for medieval armorials to include arms of towns or civic institutions. The 12 names and 66 arms in segment 20 are by far the largest collection encountered. Only the 36 items in the Miltenberg (MIL:315-350), 39 items in the Stuttgarter (STU:408-446) and 18 in Jörg Rugen (RUG:282-309) are comparable. The 23 towns in Hainaut in the LeBlancq (LBQ:2320-2342) are quite unique. Some town arms were of course fairly widely known, primarily those of the major trading towns (e.g. Venezia, Genoa, Firenze, Köln, Brugge), the major towns in the compiler's neighbourhood (e.g. Basel, Strasbourg) and the arms of Rome associated with the Church and ancient history. But it is notable that Paris is entered by name only, and a few have been given diocesan arms (e.g. Trier, Passau) or those of their rulers (e.g. Milano, Padua). Dacher (or the manuscript Vindobon.5070 attributed to him by Hardt) mixed the town emissaries with those of prelates and doctores. Several legends repeat the text in the Dacher list. Richental mentions only a few by name in his text (e.g. Bibrach and Buchhorn, ms. A, Buck KCR 65). In the vs. H (c.1700, by von Hardt) armorial, several of the town arms and names in the older mss. have been replaced or amended by contemporary arms.

The present arms indicate (some of) those towns where the town councils sent observers to Konstanz as indicated in the legends (von ... ain etliche botschafft, omitted in most items). Some were no doubt selected because they were also centres of learning, having universities or monasteries with specialists in law and theology. Most items are privileged towns (Reichstadt) with a few sovereign city-states leading the list and 16 Swiss cantons at the end.

11. Lists of people present

The armorial appendix to the Richental chronicle is for the modern armorist mainly a magnificent collection of coats-of-arms, but for the contemporaries it would both be a source mentioning family members, friends and not so friendly parties and a survey of those participating in this great event – a glory to the town and also a time and place for political consultations.

The latter would in any case interest rulers of all kinds all over Europe, and they would like to be informed. Ambassadors regularly communicated with their masters giving reports and receiving instructions. Among the reports would be notes of some of the persons present. For the semi-independent imperial cities this might be of higher importance than for princely rulers, not least on the background of the contested election in 1410 of Sigismund as king and future emperor. Augsburg paid one Bastian Ilsung 4½ gulden for a list of people present (Riegel KK 37). The attendance at several occasions was also noted, e.g. the formal entry of Sigismund on his return from France, Spain and England. Not surprisingly several lists of participants have survived in town archives or incorporated into town chronicles.

Apart from the political aspects there were more mundane administrative concerns. The town or city of Konstanz was large by medieval standards, and prosperous – that was the reason it was chosen as the venue. But with a large influx of people of all ranks: church dignitaries, princes, nobles and a virtual host of craftsmen and traders – estimates ranging from 15.000 to 150.000 people present, probably more than a doubling of the local population – there would be a need to secure adequate provisions and keep track of the comings and goings, as well as where the more important people were lodged. For this purpose a joint town-papal-imperial commission was established early and Ulrich Richental was a senior employee for its affairs. One of its products was an official listing of people presented to Sigismund (Riegel KK 31). Communication among the many non-residents was a major problem, but was eased by the tradition of hanging the guest's coats-of-arms outside their lodgings as illustrated in the chronicle. Some 45-65 heralds were employed, in part to help decipher their whereabouts. These must also be some of the sources for the arms appended to the chronicle.

11.1 Surving lists and estimates of influx.

Joseph Riegel examined 395 works related to the council, incl. mss. K & A, for his thesis of 1914, and made a consolidated survey, which might still be extant at the University of Freiburg in Breisgau. From these, he summarized 19 contemporary estimates of people present (Riegel KK 73-75) and reviewed their contents, finding lists of names in 8, including 5 lists published and examined for this edition. The listings differ in contents, sequence and detail, and most have a large number of misspellings indicating that they were taken down by dictation. All divide the names by rank and whether they belonged to the clergy or laymen. From the individual numbers in the Riegel table it is likely that some were copied from a common source.

Apart from Frankfurt Stadtarchiv, ms. 962a:53v-65v, of may 1418 (not examined) and the Richental mss. the names were apparently collected before march 1415. The Frankfurt manuscript has a further two lists (fo.1r-37r of march 1415, fo.67r-71v of february 1415, Riegel KK 71-72). The latter being a short report from one of their emissaries giving names only.

The better known and largest list, giving both names and number of retinue, is the one ascribed to Gebhard Dacher and printed in Hardt KK from Wien, ms. Vindobon. 5070 al. Codex Elstraw. The names were probably compiled by March 1415 and Riegel hypothesizes that this might be the offical list presented to Sigismund. The entries in common with items in the Richental mss. are listed in Appendix M. The clerics are commented on in Lenfant KK 2:365-386.

Conrad Justinger (d. 1438) wrote his Berner Chronik at the same time as Richental did his for Konstanz. Justinger is known to have visited Konstanz and might have used the Richental 'Urschrift' as a source. Like Dacher the large Justinger list includes the retinue. The numbers appear to be the same, apart from the occasional lost or modified Roman numeral, e.g. xxv for xxxv in the retinue of Johannes patriarch of Constantinople and xxv for xxx persons with the Hungarian Herzog Peter von Lindouw. The entries, however, have several misconceptions: e.g. the embassies of King Fridrich von Engellant (for Henry V), king Johans von Dennmark (for Eric VII) and of king Wenzelaus in Portigael.

The Richental mss. with the Recapitulatio in mss. A & E can be viewed as reworked attendance lists, in part with coats-of-arms, in part without. Riegel only analysed mss. K & A, proposing ms. K to be the older and better (Riegel KK 43). Riegel had little to remark on the coats-of-arms (and no need to do so), but several comments on the kaleidoscopic mixing of fact and imagination in listings of realms and princes. He also notes a number of probable sources for the imaginary arms and the order of the realms of the world. In summary, mss. P & A & G & vs. D have both names and retinue (some as number of horses) in a few legends, and retinues in some name lists, while mss. K & W only have the names in the legends, but retinues in the name lists.

Finally Riegel KK 69 gives his estimate of the number of names by category (cardinals, bishops, .., counts, .., citizens), including those not identifiable (186 clerics, 86 laymen), dead during the council (64), known to be present (1237 clerics, 1583 laymen) and mentioned only in the lists (665).

11.2 The lists of laymen compared with the armorial.

Even the short list in ms. 962a: 69r-71r with easily identifiable names has a few misspellings and names not entered in the armorial, e.g. Fhr. von Sidauwe, von Damsberg and Ilburg, but also confirms the presence of von Rosslein [703].

Both Dacher and Justinger have the same set of dukes and counts in identical sequences. The names are very similar to those used in the KCR legends, though Justinger has more misspellings, e.g. 'doman' for Thomas. The sequences in the KCR mss. are all different, and there are more items in KCR, particularly in ms. G / vs. D. The KCR manuscripts include the arms and names of dukes only represented by their embassies, of which most were noted by Justinger and Dacher separately. Both Dacher and Justinger have Karibut for Fedor of White Russia [615], and a Peter von Lindouw from Hungary, who might be Peter von Lindwach, a Hungarian duke in mss. A & W & K [700], or actually Peter Czech Levai [791, P448] with different arms.

Among the counts in segments 13-14 Giovanni Giacomo M.Montferrato [665] comes from 'Ferrer' in Dacher and is surprisingly transformed into a MGf. Montfort in Justinger. Apart from a tail of names in Justinger there are only 7 counts in the two lists that cannot be found among the 121 (vs. D) or 187 items (total counts) in the KCR mss.

While Justinger omits all other nobles apart from the first few [810-815], Dacher has a large number in columns 35-50 noted as Freyen, milites or servi, many grouped into retinues. Most of the barons (Freyen) and knights (milites) can be found among the items in the KCR mss., while most of the servi cannot. The majority of names belong, not surprisingly, to Germans, Bohemians, Hungarians and Poles with a few retinues from England, Italy and France. Similarly, the KCR mss. contain many names not entered in the listings.

The group of laymen included not only nobles, but also observers from the many town councils of the empire. Some of these were mentioned by Dacher (column 28-32) in a section of mixed prelates, doctores and ambassadors.

The major value of the lists of laymen is in confirming their presence during the council. For a few the spellings in Dacher (less for Justinger) give support to the present assignment of arms to the families. The first names in both the KCR mss. and the listings ought to be treated with care, some are evidently free fantasy, but most of the Germanic names can be trusted.

11.3 The lists of clerics compared with the armorial.

The listing of the patriarchs, cardinals and archbishops is similar in Dacher and Justinger and both include the number of retinues. There are slight differences in the text, Justinger adding that the 'patriarchs' in Dacher column 12 belong to the embassy of Pope Gregor XII, and also some further retinues. The above are all in the armorial. The end of the paragraph on p. 245 lists a few additional archbishops, not in Dacher, but in the armorial, e.g. Jakobus Abp. Olmütz in Böhmen [437].

Justinger calculates that 108 bishops, 33 auxiliary bishops (Weihbischofen) and 113 abbots were present. He also mentions the presence of auditores and doctores from the universities. Neither of these is named, but he has Andrew Newhouse [456] as commander of the O. St. John in England, not the Teutonic Order as Dacher and some of the KCR versions has him.

Nearly all of the bishops named by Dacher are likely to be in the armorial. Only about 30 names could not be placed and these might well be non-armigers from non-noble families.

12. Evaluation and summary

The five surviving manuscripts, three early modern printings and many extracts make the chronicle of the concilium held in 1414-1418 written by the Konstanzer citizen Ulrich Richental perhaps the most enduring armorial ever. As historical evidence there is general agreement that it is of little value, but it gives a fine view of late medieval town life and the trimmings of festivities.

The chronicle-armorial may be classified into most of the categories: occasional, illustrative, universal and composite. Using the latter – and for a moment excluding the narrative – the segments present a hierarchial view of both the lay and spiritual presence. The armorial part of the three printings (with a modern reprint of 1923 and facsimile on the web) is simply reissues of the St. Georgen version (ms. G). Two other manuscripts (K & W) are essentially similar, leaving the last two variants (mss. A & P) to be different from all. An evaluation of the textual part and of the artistic merits and relations of the miniatures falls outside of this edition, but I would agree with Wacker on her presentation of the features and on most conclusions.

The date of the original compilation is given by the occasion, and as previous scholars essentially agree on the dates of manufacture of the surviving versions (c.1464-1475) and that they were made in the Bodensee area after the death of Richental – and mostly in the workshop of Gebhard Dacher – there was little reason for changing this. One may note that in this case (and in a few other instances in the geographical area) there was little difference in time between the first printing in 1483 and continued copying by hand. The Prague manuscript is dated 1464, but as Pope Paul II was elected late in the year, must have been worked on after this date. Mss. A & K must have been written after 1431, when Sigismund planned his coronation in Rome, as they have the same empty space for the date (A: 7n).

Most multi-copy armorials are essentially similar. They usually differ only in a few omissions and some later additions and may have several segments transposed. The KCR versions vary greatly both in the order of fragments and in the sequence of the individual items. The printed Sorg incunable with 1210 items was probably identical to ms. G, which has lost several pages, but they are concordant page by page. In all, the present edition has 1683 items, including some blank shields and a few items with different arms for the same entry. In part the differences may be attributed to differences in the reading order during copying from the now lost sources. Many segments may be read in part or in toto as per column or per row, and pages of the sources might have been shuffled and could have had different formats.

The number of miniatures differs between the versions, but are all derived from the same designs. Compared to vs. D & ms. G, the other manuscripts have large omissions among the laity, but also have equally large additions in the segments of counts and barons. In the case of ms. P, the editor appears to have eliminated any grouping of nobility below the princes. A second difference implies that the versions might have been intended for different audiences. Towns are only present in ms. G & vs. D. The lower clergy and the universities are absent from mss. K & W, and in ms. P there is no mentioning of the non-cardinals in the conclave, effectively making this just a presentation of the church hierarchy.

Perhaps the most influential part is the occurrence of a large number of imaginary arms. This might not be the first occurrence of the arms, and it might be an invention of Dacher. Identical arms are found in the Ingeram of c.1450 and in Uffenbach of 1400/1440, but they were probably invented by Richental to illustrate and amplify that the whole world came to his mother town for the great event of unifying the Church after both the great and the western schisms. The idea had many followers, taken up by Grünenberg, Rugen, Miltenbach, the French armorial dit de heraut Charolais, and others.

Compared to other armorials the KCR presents similar problems of identification: There are nearly illegible legends, probably so even when the surviving manuscripts were copied, mistakes in blazons, and some coats-of-arms and names cannot be found in the available references. But the major problem with KCR is that the segment of bishops was evidently bungled already by Richental himself. The notes might have been made in several fractions: perhaps one of dioceses, one for the names and dignities and one for the coats-of-arms – all held together by reference numbers. As the notes were only made into a draft chronicle several years after the collation, the connecting order must have been destroyed and could only be reestablished for those prelates well-known. The German bishops would be easy to check on, the Poles identified by their curious clan hrbs, and the English might have been on one set of pages.

Finally for this most well-documented event, there is an independent armorial source, complementary rather than overlapping: the Livro de arautos (ARK) by a Portuguese herald, probably not one of the helpers of Richental, but who knows – and there might be one or two additonal armorial fragments still hidden in the archives.

The second of two miniatures on the conciliation of Friederich of Austria with king Sigismund after the former had been banned. In this picture [16-22, P49] Friedrich [587] and the two electors, Friedrich of Brandenburg (Hohenzollern) [586] and Ludwig of Pfalz [585], kneel before Sigismund while the oath is being read. Representatives of the city-republics of Firenze, Genoa and Venezia stand behind the king. The electors are wearing their ermine caps of rank and Sigismund the imperial crown.

In ms.P Hohenzollern (should be Ar-Sa) is replaced by the eagle of Brandenburg.
The first miniature [K33-K35] is omitted in vs.D&S, and the corresponding folio missing in ms.G.

There is a conflict between the different attributions of items [47-49]. In ms.K with 'dns conradus doctor in theologya in haidelberg'. No legend in ms.A. MIL:1597 follows vs.D, 'dns iohannes eps tragurensis in unger', in assigning the arms to the Bp.Trogir: Simon - not Johannes. In ms.P [P216], among the bishops, both legends are mentioned.

The present arms were probably intended for Conrad von Susato, i.e. from Soest, dr.theol., provost of St.Cyriach in Neuhausen nr. Worms, and member of the Conclave for the German Nation. His arms are not known. His name in Dacher L 24 is 'Cunradus Hildisheim, Licent.in Decret'.

The other possibility is Simon Dominis Bp.Trogir (Tragurien., suffr Split, modern Trau in Croatia, on the dalmatian coast) 1403-1423, but he was not a member of the Conclave. His name is in Dacher L 14 and the present arms assigned to [P216].

Another instance of confused legends. The present arms, Pfalz qtg Bayern, refers to the overlord of the university town of Heidelberg, and the person would be Lambert Stock or de Stipite, cluniac benedictine, prior of Bertrée al. Belcheia in the diocese of Liège, member of the embassy to Narbonne and of the Conclave for the German Nation. Lambert is not mentioned by Dacher.

The legend in ms.K reads: 'dominus lampertus de stippate doctor in theologia in norwegen qui studuit in haidelberg', and in vs.D: 'magister nicolaus de susaco', the legend must be a conflagation of Conrad von Susato [47] and Nicolaus von Dinkelsbühl [50]. No legend in ms.A.

This unusual third attribution of arms to Julius Caesar must be due to a copying mistake by Richental or one of the later editor-copyists, probably from the dragon arms in [150]. The arms are usually attributed to Josua, the companion of Moses, who led the jews to Palestine and parted the land among them. The bull's head might be a reference to the 'golden calf' worshipped in the deserts of Sinai, but also arms with birds and dragon are attributed to him in french and english armorials. Bosnia, one of several ill-defined partly catholic and partly orthodox principalities in Balkan formerly subject to either the king of Hungary or the byzantine emperor, but now heavily influenced by the moslem ottoman turks . The item probably refers to the territory centered on Sarajevo ruled by Stefan Ostoja, d.1418, r.1398-1404 and 1409-1418 with the title of kral or king. He married secondly Kujave (divorced 1415). She might be the person mentioned in [574]. The Kotromanic bans of Bosnia gained independence of Hungary in 1353 and around 1390 gained and lost Dalmatia and Croatia to Hungary and other parts to Rascia [214] before becoming tributary to the osmans and a turkish province in 1463. Caspar / Gaspard of Arabia or of Tharsia / Tarsus & Egrosilla or from Ethiopia, died in Armenia on January 11 in 54 at the age of 109. With Balthazar [192, P721] and Melchior [193/P722] the three magi and astrologers, who travelled to Bethlehem to adore the newborn Jesus. The feast of the 'three holy kings' on Twelfth Night, when Balthazar died at the age of 112 in the year 54, is the traditional end of the Christmas festivities. They were especially worshipped in Köln, to where their remains were transferred from Milano by emperor Friederich Barbarossa in 1164. Their bones were 'discovered' by Helena, mother of emperor Constantin the Great around 325 and placed first in the Hagia Sophia in Constantinople, then transferred to Milano by St.Eustorgius. The legend has that they gave their wealth to the poor and travelled preaching the Gospel, but were only baptised around year 40 by St.Thomas in India. Their three crowns are placed in the chief of the arms of Reichstadt Köln [1145]. Due to copying mistakes their arms are variously attributed to either of the three. Gaspard has different arms in [P720], see also the introduction.

Prester John, the mythical priest-king who ruled India Major and Minor with 4 archbishops and 30 bishops, as the long latin text on vs.D:102v-103r tells. He is also named as father of king David alias Gengis Khan; in later Middle Age his India was moved to Ethiopia. He was described firstly by Bishop Otto of Freising, Ger., in his Chronicon (1145) from talks with the bishop of Gabula/Gebal in Anthiochia, and by Vincent of Beauvais (Seymour JM xv) and many medieval authors. He reportedly wrote a letter in 1165 to Manuel Comnenus emperor of Byzans, but this is a forgery (possibly from the court of Frederick Barbarossa) and was anti-byzantine in content; the letter was answered by pope Alexander IV.

There are royal crowns above most shields. The present arms were probably derived from one of the armsattributed to Armenia, and was placed on the Ortelius map of 1579.

The ruler of the central part of Rascia, i.e. the despotate of Epirus with the capital Arta, was the albanian Yaqub Spata lord of Arta, r.1414-16. The origin of the despotate was those byzantian provinces on the adriatic coast and central Greece, which was not conquered by the latin empire established in 1204 during the 4th Crusade. The title of despot was a high non-hereditary rank conferred by the byzantime emperor and usually restricted to members of the imperial family given large landed appanages. Parts of the despotate of Epirus was seeded to Napoli-Sicilia on the marriage c.1294 of Thamar of Epirus and Philippe d'Anjou P.Tarento, and incorporated into the title of Johanna Q.Napoli [..] as Ravie or Rascie Regina. Parts were temporarily in the hands of Stephan IV Dusan of Serbia (r.1331-55), who used the title emperor of Rascia and Romania, despot of Arta and count of Thessaly" in 1349. He was partially succed by Carlo Tocco C.Cephalonia (d.1429) and by the serb, Djuradj Vukovic, 1375-1456, hungarian magnate in 1426, knez 1427, 1428 duke-despot of Rascia/Raitzen & Albania, 1429 byzantine despot, 1444 ottoman vassal. The arms are a modification of the byzantine eagle. Royal crown above shield.

Gérard du Puy al. de Miremont, d.1420, Bp-E. Mende 1413; Bp.Carcasonne 1413 (Carcassonen, suffr. Narbonne).

Not for Thomas Morganti, Bp.Lecce 1410-1419 (Licien., suffr. Otranto; kingdom of Napoli), appointed by Gre.XII and noted in the retinue of Thièbaut de Rougemont Abp.Besancon [328/A220]. Arms not verified.

There are questions of both title and name. The 'thiomas liciensis / litziensis / latziensis' in the legends might correspond to either Thomas Aep.Lucensis in Dacher L 13, Thomas Ep.Liciensis in the kingdom of Napoli in Dacher L 14 and Justinger or even 'jacobus aeps licientensis in regno cacilie alcior' listed in ms.A page 341. The latter might be Lugo (Lucen., suffr. Compostella, Spain).

Similar arms are in VSW:38 'licen in neaples' andf as Q1+4 in RUG:317 'erzbischoff zo rycenssis in reich nappollis'.

Paravicini ARK 173 proposed that the arms belong to Gérard du Puy al. de Miremont, d.1420, Bp.Carcassonne 1413 appointed by Jo.XXIII, also present. His argument is based on the 1381 seal {checky & border} for Gérard du Puy, d.1389, a nephew of pope Gregor XI (Beaufort), Ab.Marmoutier and cardinal S.Clemente (1375) in XSV:136. The cardinal was born at Château du Puy (cne Rosiers-d'Egletons, dep Corrèze). Du Chesne gives him the Beaufort arms impaling Az cross Ar (Miranda C). By 1445 the nearby Château Maumont was held by Perrin du Puy (REV:111), who bore {Or 3 mullets Az}. All three were from the region, and might be relatives despite the differences and uncertainties of the arms.

There are further alternatives, e.g.. Nikolaus Lazari de Guinigi Bp.Lucca (Lucan., imm.; prov Toscana), where the bishop was given archepiscopal privileges by pope Alexander II (r.1061-1073), and Francesco Bp.Lettere 1407-1428 (Litteren., suffr. Amalfi; kingdom of Napoli).

Not identified. The 'rikardus waugring' must be a conflation of Richard Courtenay, d.1415, Bp.Norwich (Norwicen., England) 1413 and his successor, John Wakering [54, 369], d.1425. The Courtenay arms were {Or 3 roundels Gu}. In VSW:49 'normantin' , and vs.D a fleur-de-lis Sa in chf is added.

In ms.P with Or-Sa and 'johannes benedicto epus tififmus novitem electus his constatiensis'.

In [1094, 1110] similar arms are attributed to the english gentlemen William Newland and Peter Kraft.

Johan Zipflar, Ab.Reitenhaslach 1407-17. He was the first infuled abbot of this cistercian monastery near Burghausen in Bayern. The arms are the monastic 'Virgin & child enthroned' or Himmelskönigin, principal patroness of all cistercian institutions, qtg Zipflach, as on his tombstone. Also in [446] as 'gerladus epus cortonen' for Enoch Bucci Bp.Cortona. In mss.A&P with Virgin Mary alone.

Arms of Hungary, ruled by emperor Sigismund. Hungary-new qtg Hungary-ancient (Arpad).
Sigismund von Luxembourg, 1368-1437 o.s.p.m., R.Hungary 1387, Kf.Brandenburg (1378-88, 1411-17), elected rex romanorum 1410, crowned 1414 in Aachen, R.Böhmen 1419, crowned in Rome as emperor 1433. He married firstly the heiress Marie of Hungary (1370-95), being engaged in 1374, and educated at the court of Louis I R.Hungary and in Poland. After being imprisoned during an insurrection, he married secondly Barbara von Cilly (1392-1451), daughter of Herman Gf.Cilly [573]. He was a driving force behind the Concilium Constantiense and its protector. He was absent from Konstanz 1415.07.14-27.01.1417 on travels to Spain, England and France in order to collect support for ending the Schism.
The subseries [566-571] in vs.D and ms.G are arms representing the major titles of Sigismund of Luxembourg before his election as king of the Romans. They fit naturally with the preceding miniature, ms.D fo.168v, of Sigismund as emperor HRR with both the imperial and the german eagle. They also fit with the next segment of ladies, headed by his queen and second wife.

Friedrich (IV) von Habsburg, 1382-1439, 'mit dem leeren Tasche', Hz.Österreich & Gf.Tirol. A common legend for the two brothers, see [18].

Friederich (IV) von Habsburg, 1382-1439, 'mit dem leeren Tasche', duke of Österreich-Tirol, a major magnate in Breisgau west of Konstanz. He quarrelled with his brother Ernst 'der Eiserne' (1377-1424) duke of Österreich-Steiermark in 1416 over Tirol at Konstanz. He was involved in the flight of pope Johannes XXIII in march 1415, reputedly as Friederich jousted with Herman Gf.Cilly [434], and a Reichsacht was proclaimed against him. He submitted to Sigismund in may 1415 as visualized on fo.46v-47r, but again fled Konstanz in march 1416 as his quarrel with the Bp.Trient was approaching legal proceedings at the Council. Arms of Austria, the ancient arms of the Habsburgers were {Or lion Gu} and of Tirol {Ar eagle Gu ch. crescent Ar}.

von Landenberg, noted 1177, from Landenberg, can Zürich, but with most of the holdings in Schwaben. There were 3 major branches in Baden: Alten-, Hohen-, Breiten-Landenberg, named for the 3 closely sited castles around Alt-Landenberg (Gem. Bauma, Bz. Pfäffikon, can Zürich). In addition there were several minor branches named for other castles: e.g. Burg Bichelsee, Burg Wülfingen and Burg Werdegg. The Hohen-Landenbergs qtd with {qtly Or-Sa}. The names Herman and Ulrich were common.

Among those present in Konstanz of the (Alten-)Landenberg von Greifensee were: Ital Herman (d.1415) and his sons Beringer (d.c.1453) and Hans Rudolf (d.1463), who sold Bichelsee in 1423. Their cousin Ulrich (d.1424) auf Wülfingen. Among their more distant cousins were the brothers Beringer (d.c.1442) Pfleger von Andelfingen and Herman gt Bich (d.1431) von Hohen-Landenberg auf Wellenberg and their nephew Hugo (d.1465).

In ms.A p.454 [A.742, A743] with a list of names: Albrecht von der alten; Bering, Herman von der Hohen; Albrecht, Bering, Hans, Hug von Landenberg. A similar list with [880]: 'albrecht.beringer.hermâ.hanns.rudolf.haug. all vonn hohê landêberg. Albrecht beringer von sunnenberg'.

Johan and Conrad von Friedingen with the 'bend & lion' of Friedingen-neu. Heinrich and Ulrich [879, 540] have the 'per pale' Friedingen-alt. The Friedingen, noted 1089, had their seat in Burg Friedingen (Kr. Konstanz).

The canon Ulrich [540] might be a misreading for Georg, a canon of Konstanz in the not too reliable genealogy in Kindler OB. According this There was a Heinrich (fl.1418), who used the 'bend & lion', who had a cousin Johan (fl.1370-86) with 3 sons: Ulrich (fl.1391-1415) an episcopal bailiff, and Conrad zu Hohenkrähen, a knight by 1409 who must have died before 1472, both sealed with the 'per pale', while their brother Hans/Johan (d.1417) sealed with the 'bend & lion'.

Friedingen-neu, Friedingen-alt is in [879]. In ms.K, instead of the lion, an illegible text is written in top sn corner.

Abp.Aquileja (Aquilegen.) in Istria, a patriarchate. Antonio da Ponte Bp.Concordia [420/A232], as administrator, when Antonio Panciera, Abp. 1402 was created cardinal in 1411 [125]. Ludwig von Teck assumed the See in 1418. Arms of the archdiocese or patriarchate as in Q1+4 of Ludwig von Teck [126].

On A:343n are 2 additonal arms (tridentin, chumen) and 9 names (caffanien*, cattanacen*, croconien*, bononien*, cropien*, milicen*, chusentinen*, maturanen*, aquilen & friul & agla) and a further 6 arms on p.344 (mantuen, chumen, paduen, concordien, seren*, naulen*) - all presumably suffragans of Aquileia, but only 5 can be found among the 16/17 suffragans of Aquileia.

Not identified. <hertneck> is a later legend, in the same hand as 'adelshoven' for [985/K835]. There is a sligt trace of the chief being intended as per bend.

The scribe must have thought of Herter von Herteneck, who used Ar-Gu (Sieb 23/6.2:12+t3). Wilhelm Herter von Hertneck (fl.1475) was one of the principal swiss captains during the wars with Burgundy, commanding at Murten and Nancy. However, from the placing, the bavarian Freudenberg [975 / K823] or the swabian Gf.Hohenberg, a Zollern cadet (Sieb 2/1.1.4:12 a.o.) might be candidates.

The patriarch of Antiochia had the present arms and the legend 'dns johannes titule sancte ceciliae cardinalis' in the miniature [P65], when he blessed the Conclave. But the only cardinal Simon would be Simon Cramaud dit de Rheims or St.Lorenzo in Lucina, in [135, 137] with different arms.

The cardinal of Sta.Cecilia was Antonio de Chalant [131] with different arms.

Jean Mauroux, patriarch of Antiochia, is in [141] with different arms.

Wittold Schwidergail al. Vytautas grand duke of Lithuania (r. 1392-1430), victor over the Deutsche Orden at Tannenberg 1410, and his brother Swidrigailo (r. 1430-32). A branch of this family, the Jagiello, ruled Lithuania and Poland from 1386. Casimir IV (1427-1492) was a great nephew of Vytautas. The 'grill' emblem (pillars of Gediminas) on the shield of the knight in some variants is the present emblem of the lithuanian armed forces. Gediminas (1257-1342) was grandfather of Vytautas, and the principal hero of the resistance of the heathen lithuanians in their fight against the Deutsche Orden.

Arms attributed to an unidentified dominion of the ottoman empire, probably the byzantine doubleheaded eagle. In GRU:28r/267 listed between Athens and Trebizond as a kingdom in Eastern Europe or Asia Minor. The items [P785, P786] might be the same as the two dukes of Tropea in [613, 614]. The arms are also used for Rascia on the Balkans. The name might be inspired by Burg Schiltach (Kr.Wolfach, Baden) owned by the Geroldseck family. Karibud is mentioned in Dacher 33 and [615].

Appendix B Manuscript pedigree

(a) Manuscript pedigree according to the textual and iconographic analysis in Wacker KK 1:23.
(b) Manuscript pedigree as modified by Clemmensen on heraldic evidence.

The capital letters: A, G, K, P (Pr), W indicate the armorial manuscripts, D and S (D2) the printed versions. E, Pt, St and the names are manuscripts without coats-of-arms.
The letter q is the putative collection of notes by Richental. The other small letters are for putative manuscripts, now lost.

The putative manuscripts a5 and y (or z) appear to be superfluous.

02	Popes	P	4756-4768	13	only present in ms.P, 245r-246v (P756-P768);
03	Cardinals	ALL MSS	108-143	70	cardinals taking part in the conclave of 1417 for the election of a new pope; -: vs.D = 70r-74r (103-138 = 36) -: ms.G = 58r-62v (47-82 = 36), except for the transposition of two pairs (72+74 / 60+62; 79+80 / 66+65); -: ms.P = 200v-205v (125-165 = 41); -: ms.A = pp.314-326 (3-41 = 38), incl. A40 pope Benedict XIII (Luna) as cardinal, the cardinals are painted praying dressed in mitre and robe with cardinal's hats above their arms behind them; -: ms.K = 84v-85v (71-103 = 33), cardinal's hats, no tassels, above shields, except for patriarchs (K:84v1-2 and 85r1-2), which instead have patriarchal crosses behind; -: ms.W = 114v-115v (58-90 = 33) -: vs.H (416-449) is nearly concordant with ms.A; -: most cardinals have their family arms, a few have probably assumed personal arms; -: reproduced by Vigil Solis (VSW:2-37) including abbreviated legends, and by Schrott (QDS:13-56); REF: Brandmüller KK 1:407-429;
04	Conclave	DGAKW	45-74	30	-: 6 delegates from each of the 5 Nations were appointed non-cardinal members of the Conclave of 8-11.11.1417 for election of a new pope (Martin V, Oddone Colonna); -: vs.D = 54r-56r (45-74 = 30), 2x3, per row, mitre & staff at side of item; -: ms.G = 34r-35v (16-39 = 24), less 6 lost with old fo.64r, equivalent to D:54r; -: ms.P = not present; -: ms.A = 211n-213n (91-120 = 30), all s.n.; -: ms.K = 88r-89v (104-133 = 30), 2x4, read per column, but the 6 on 89v are read per row (K128-133: as in vs.D and ms.G), mitres and patriarchal crosses above 88r1-2 and 88v2 and 89v1, mitres above or beside the rest, irrespective of rank; -: ms.W = 117v-119v (91-120 = 30); -: vs.H = not present;
05	Dioceses Bishops	ALL MSS	305-453	218	ecclesiastical participants, bishops and archbishops, at the Council of Constance 1414-18, by latin names of diocese; -: vs.D = 72r + 122v-142r (85-89 + 305-453 = 154); -: ms.G = 45r + 84r-96v (40-44 + 214-306 = 98), 1 as a miniature, several pages missing; -: ms.P = 207r-217v (12, 166-293 = 129); -: ms.A = 328n-381n (190, 191-362, 378 = 173), placed irregularly between names and comments, all with mitre and staff, but in similar order as ms.K read by columns; follows

					Nieheim's Provinciales (Erler DN), and probably nearest to the original compilation; -: ms.K = 110v-116r (147-322 = 176), read per column in 3 columns of varying length, except 113v-114v (255-278) per row, and with empty row after 113r1-3; 110v = 3x6, 111r = 5 + 6 + 6, 111v = 3 + 2 + 3x4, 112r = 3x6 (n8 = 2 shields, n18 missing), 112v = 3x6, 113r = 3x6, 113v = 3 + empty row + 3x3, 114r1 = 3 + 3 + 2, 114v = 1 + 3, 115r = 3x6, 115v = 3 + 3 + 2 + 2 + 3 + 1, 116r = 3 + 3 + 2 + 2 + 2 (r3n3 blanco omitted); -: ms.W = 139r-142v (135-309 = 176), -: vs.H (Hardt KK 2:1591 ff) has an entirely different order; COMPARE: -: vs.D & ms.G are fully concordant, apart from missing items in ms.G and copying mistakes; -: mss.A & K & W are fully concordant apart from copying mistakes and transposition of a few subsegments and differences in reading; -: items not in vs.D noted as from mss: 46 in K, 7 in A, 12 in P, 1 blank in W (W310), ms.W missing KCR:453/K316 'ui'; -: probably used in MIL, QDS, VSW, and RUG, several RUG-items wrongly having KCR-items as Q1 al. diocesian arms; NOTE: -: only 54 of the 176 items in ms.A have arms and legends essentially correct (mostly germans and poles, 4 italians, 3 english); 13 have arms not corresponding to the legend (incl. 4 abbeys); the diocese may reasonably be identified for 57 items, but some may not have attended in person nor with proctors;
06	Abbeys	DGPAH	488-523	42	mainly german abbeys, several only as legends without arms; different selections with some overlap between versions; there are usually more abbots in the lists of names; -: vs.D:155v-158r (483-518; 36 items, 3x4), list of abbots 158v-160v; -: ms.G = 113rv (326-337; 12 items), as in vs.D; -: ms.P = 264rv (1006-1021, 16 items), in addition P264 Fulda; -: ms.A = 382n1-8 + 383n + 384n + 387n1-5 +388n (218-229 = 12), in roughly the same order as ms.P, list of abbots 383n-388n; -: ms.K & W = not present; -: vs.H:504-519 (16 items, all with arms); -: in WB Schrott (QDS:292-361) with abbots & abbesses;
07	Canons	DGPA	524-563	51	canons of the monasteries and priests of the churches of Konstanz, several with names only, slightly different order, as if they were copied from the same source, varying the reading order between columns and rows; -: vs.D:160v-163v (524-563 = 40), some with names only; -: ms.G:115v-118r (338-377 = 40); -: ms.P = 262r-263v (971-1005 = 35), -: ms.A = 395n-399n (379-425 = 47), 3x4; -: ms.K & W & H = not present;

08	Religious Orders	DGPA	454-473	22	ranking members of some religious orders, present in Konstanz 1414-1415; -: vs.D = 143r-145r (454-473; 20 items, 2x2); -: ms.G = only the last page (fo.98r = old 141r, 307-310 = 4) left of ms.G, the items on the old foliation 139rv and 140rv are missing, but would have been concordant; -: ms.P = 218rv (294-307 = 14); -: ms.A = 407n-409n (277-291= 15), the legend of A280 being repeated in A290; -: ms.K & W & H = not present;
09	Universities	DGPA	474-487	14	arms of universities sending representatives to Konstanz; -: vs.D = 145v-148v (474-487 = 14), 2 per page; -. ms.G = 99r-102r (312-325 = 14); -: ms.P = 219r-220r (308-320 = 13); -: ms.A:411n-417n (441-454; 14 items, 2 per page); -: ms.K & W = not present; -: vs.H = 402-415; -: different order in mss, except vs.D & G & H;
